BUILDERS OF CITY WILL ORGANIZE

Formation of Exchange in Glendale Under Way; Tell of Plans

Important steps toward organizing a Builders' Exchange in Glendale were taken last night by representatives of thirty-two building firms of this city, at a dinner meeting held in the Harriet Mae tearooms on Harvard and Maryland, W. H. Hellman presiding.

A. N. Morris and R. W. Stratford, field secretary and organizer of the Los Angeles Builders' Exchange, presented to the gathering a practical plan of organization.

A committee was then appointed to go into this plan with Mr. Morris and Mr. Stratford, Peter L. Ferry acting as chairman of this committee, which includes also W. J. Curren and J. C. May.

Committee To Meet

The committee will meet at 7:30 o'clock next Monday night, March 26, in the offices of May & Hellman, contractors, 205 East Broadway, when plans will be worked out with Mr. Morris and Mr. Stratford for lining up a large number of local men in the building trades, with a view to having them present at an important meeting Friday night, March 30, probably in the Harriet Mae tea-rooms.

"At this meeting of March 30," states Mr. Ferry, "the aim will be to get immediate action and start the ball rolling. We need a builders' organization in Glendale and we are going out after it. There are over 100 firms in the city eligible to membership, which will include every craft connected with building—not only contractors but electricians, plumbers, plasterers, shinglers, roofers and others.

"The advantages of such an organization are obvious. It will keep the firms and individuals interested in construction work better informed as to what is going on in the building world. It will tend to eliminate 'fly-by-nights' who dump a lot of material down on a lot and then elope with the firs tpayment and are seen no more. It will advertise our city afar.

On Higher Plane

"It will put the building business on a higher plane, giving us the basis for a code of ethics. And it will serve as a common court where all labor and other disputes may be arbitrated.

"One thing I want to emphasize," brought out Mr. Ferry, "and that is, this movement is not conniving in any way to boost prices or in other ways to act against owners' interests. On the contrary, with such an organization perfected we will be in a position to pass on to owners, fifty-fifty, every benefit we derive."

The organization will be known as the Glendale Builders' Exchange, and it is felt by representatives present at last night's meeting that it will be a great forward step for the city.

She suffered a serious relapse last night. This morning she was much worse.

Consultations have been held frequently by the attending physicians, who are worried over her condition.

Big Property Loss In Nebraska Result Of Heavy Floods

SERGEANT BLUFFS, Ia., March 24.—Although the ice gorge in the Missouri river above this point, is still unbroken and ice in some places is piled up twenty feet, it was believed, with a gradual lowering of the water stage, that all danger of a disastrous flood had passed.

A small gorge at Onawa, went out late yesterday, lowering the stage of the river there two feet. In South Woodbury and Monona county, in this state, and Thurston county, Nebraska, some of the most valuable wheat and corn lands are under five or six feet of water, and in some cases great piles of ice have been raised that will require weeks to melt.

Efforts made yesterday to break the gorge by dropping bombs from an airplane were ineffectual. Great craters were made in the ice jam, but these were rapidly filled up again. Only one life has been lost. A property damage estimated to be in excess of $100,000 has been caused in Nebraska by the flooding of farming lands. No available estimate was obtainable on the loss to farmers in Iowa.

LOTS OF FUN AT FACULTY FROLIC

High School Teachers Give Show to Mark Close Of Jinx Day

Standing room only—and none of that—marked the popularity last night in the Glendale Union High school auditorium of the faculty frolic.

Leland Bruce, the man of mystery on the program, proved to be none other than Harold Brewster, head of the dramatic department. His impersonation of a "hick" station master—without a station or anything else but a telephone caused considerable laughter and was regarded as one of the hits of the show.

Just how many servants a rich English family has in "service" was revealed in a skit by Arthur Pinero entitled "The Play-Goers" which depicted a fashionable breakfast-room in a London residence.

"Le Problem" turned out to be a "dance" by Miss Florence Knight, Miss Lillian E. Shattuck and Miss Carey Bailard, instructors in the physical education department. They were accompanied by Miss Alma Zeigler, who also played two piano selections later.

"The Shooting of Dan Mc Grew" was properly accomplished with apologies to Robert W. Service.

Governor to Inform Farmers of Policies

SACRAMENTO, March 24. — Governor Friend W. Richardson is scheduled to outline the attitude of his administration toward agriculture at a meeting of Northern California farmers in the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce auditorium today.

Approximately 600 farmers are expected to be in attendance at the meeting.

Director G. H. Hecke of the state department of agriculture will also address the meeting.

State Convention of Moose Is Under Way

SACRAMENTO, March 24. — The third annual convention of the Loyal Order of Moose was called to order here this afternoon with approximately 1,000 delegates, drawn from every section of the state in attendance.

The two-day conclave opened with an address by Grand Regent A. Vander Naillen, Jr.

Denies Germany And Soviet Russia In Secret Agreement

MUNICH, March 24.—"I give you my word of honor; I give the people of America my word of honor that no secret convention between Germany and soviet Russia exists," declared Chancellor Wilhelm Cuno in the most emphatic accents today.

The chancellor had just been told of the reported Russo-German agreement being circulated in the Rhineland. The correspondent pointed out that if the document were authentic it would be a great piece of news of importance to the whole world. If fictitious, it was a monumental hoax designed either to affect the exchange market or to influence international relations. It was pointed out that such a hoax would shake the world's trust in Germany if it were found that the government were in any way implicated. The correspondent then handed to the chancellor a copy of the "treaty agreement."

Chancellor Cuno took it with keen interest. It was the first time he had seen it.

"I can tell you now that there is not a scintilla of truth in this document, for it is not genuine," declared the chancellor.

The correspondent asked him to read the paper carefully. The chancellor adjusted his glasses, and his eyes raced over the typewritten lines of the bulky document. His face grew more and more grave. His brow wrinkled, and finally he banged his fist down upon the table with a blow that jarred that article of furniture.

"This," he said, "is the most gigantic piece of trickery I have ever seen. It is an invention from beginning to end, but a clever one. It is the most plausible document I have ever seen. It certainly is made to look as though it were true."

WATERS RISE AS ICE JAM HOLDS

Hundreds Flee to Higher Ground When Floods Menace Valley

SIOUX CITY, Ia., March 24.—Hundreds of residents of the bottom lands of Sioux City and the farming country surrounding are homeless today, driven from their places of abode by Missouri river ice gorge floods.

Flood waters this morning are slowly rising in the residential section of the low lands. Unless dynamiters succeed in jarring loose the great ice gorge below the city, the entire bottom land district soon will be under water.

More than 5000 farmers on the Nebraska and Iowa shores of the Missouri have left their homes, driving their stock to the high lands, where they are camping until the flood recedes.

One gorge below Blair, Neb., broke late last night, causing a drop of two feet in the river at that point.

Waters are backing up on the town of Vermillion, S. D., as the result of a gorge in the Missouri a few miles below the city.

Damage to farm property in Iowa alone is estimated at $5,000,000. Only three lives are reported lost.

Gorge Breaks Up

LINCOLN, Neb., March 24.—A dispatch from Blair, Neb., today reports that the great ice gorge which made many families homeless and flooded much valuable farming lands in Iowa and Nebraska, broke late last night with a loud detonation and swept down the Missouri river. The river had risen three feet an hour up to that time and was creeping near the seventeen-foot flood stage at Sioux City, then began to recede, and it was believed all danger had passed.

Erect Huge Cross at Easter Service Site

A cross twenty feet high is being installed today on Observation Point in Forest Lawn Memorial Park to mark the spot where will be held Glendale's Easter Sunrise services.

These services are being given considerable publicity in this vicinity. The four main highways leading into Glendale are marked with large ornamental bill boards announcing them. In addition, Pacific Electric cars next week will carry signs on the sides of all of them which make the run over this line.

Boy Scouts today are marking the roads to Observation Point with arrows. According to R. E. Tucker, local director of Community Service, parking space will be set aside for a great many automobiles.

South Pasadena Mayor Talks to Legion Post

Attorney Phil Dodson, mayor of South Pasadena and member of the state executive committee of the American Legion, spoke last night to members of the local post on "The Value of the Legion to a Community."

A resolution was passed which commended the City Council for attempting to obtain an airport for Glendale, approving its action in submitting the matter to a popular vote and indorsing the bond issue.

There was a short discussion in regard to the two-acre clubhouse site on the northeast corner of Campbell and Mountain streets, which will be sold to Post 127 by the City Council if popular approval is obtained at the municipal election.

Automobiles Collide In Glendale Streets

Several automobile collisions occurred yesterday in Glendale.

Machines driven by Ronald C. Owens of 347 North Brand boulevard and C. Anderson of 3732 Seneca avenue met about 5 o'clock at the intersection of Central and Park avenues.

Mrs. R. S. Randall of 1818 North Verdugo road about 4 o'clock was unable to stop her machine on Los Feliz road quickly enough to prevent striking a machine driven by Orville L. Lake of 1142 South Hobart street, Los Angeles.

Broadway and Orange street was the scene at 3:45 p. m. of a collision between automobiles operated by E. W. Woolsey of 1013 East Palmer street and C. Uhlenberg of 827 East Colorado street.

OXFORD BEATS CAMBRIDGE IN BOAT RACE

PUTNEY ON-THE-THAMES, March 24.—Oxford university created a stunning surprise today by outrowing Cambridge in the annual four mile boat race between the ancient rivals and received the wild acclaim always accorded the winner of this great classic of the sport season. It was a popular victory with the almost countless thousands who lined the old Thames from Putney to Mortlake.

225 MEN GET RELEASE FROM L. A. JAIL

LOS ANGELES, March 24.—Two hundred and twenty-five men were released from the Lincoln Heights jail today on a blanket parole order signed by Police Parole Officer Berry after Chief of Police Louis D. Oaks had made a personal investigation of conditions in the jail. There were 763 prisoners in the place at the time, although its capacity is supposed to be only 300. There were 160 men in a cell in which there were accommodations for only ten. Of these 150 either were standing up or sleeping on the floor.

FEAR FASCISTI INVASION OF BAVARIA

BERLIN, March 24.—Prussian Minister of the Interior Severin today issued orders to the Prussian police to prepare themselves for any emergency. The Prussian government fears a Fascisti invasion of Bavaria. A government official declared they had received information that the Fascisti plan to attack Prussia through Thuringia. With the acute situation, machine guns have been mounted for the protection of President Ebert and Chancellor Cuno.

Suspect Arrested in Dry Raid Escapes From Law

LOS ANGELES, March 24.—Leaping from the automobile in which he was being taken to the Long Beach jail, T. Nagai, one of the eight men arrested Thursday in the mammoth "booze" raid on the Curtis corporation fish canning company's wharf, in which $20,000 worth of liquor, a fishing boat and five automobiles were seized, escaped early today from a prohibition officer after the latter had fired a number of shots at the fleeing man.

The escape took place at Wilmington when the officer stopped at a gasoline filling station for more fuel. Nagai was the owner of the fishing boat seized during the raid.

The officer commanded the fleeing man to stop and when he failed to do so fired several shots at him, none of which are thought to have taken effect. Immediate search of the vicinity for the missing man was started by federal officers, the sheriff's office and the police of Long Beach and San Pedro.

Alexander B. Stewart, president of the Curtis corporation, and one of the men arrested, was free today, under $25,000 bond, after a conference with Prohibition Agent in Charge H. H. Dolley, during which Stewart is said to have "broken" and offered to give a complete story of the entire affair. However, Dolley is reported to have given him little satisfaction. Gilbert Leahy, general manager for the corporation, and Victor C. Lord, sales manager, who were also taken in the raid, were still under arrest today, being unable to produce $25,000 bond. Stewart is said to deny implication in the alleged "ring."

Bombardment Of Dynamite Greets Legislative Visitors

SUTTER CREEK, Cal., March 24.—The hills of Amador county this afternoon echoed and re-echoed the thunderous barrage of welcome accorded 100 members of the legislative committee on their trip over the Mother Lode highway for which Assemblyman F. G. Stevenot is seeking an appropriation from the state of California.

Four hundred sticks of dynamite were used in the bombardment, while the boys' band from the Preston School of Industry at Ione played martial airs.

Later this afternnoo, as the solons sit down to dinner, they will witneess Stevenot's brother, at Malone mine, on Carson hill, near Angel's camp, pour three gold bricks worth $20,000 each, the product of California's richest mine. They also will visit Bunker Hill, Fremont and the Treasure Gold mines, after traveling over the famous Logtown grade of Calaveras county.

There will be "nothing doing" at Drytown, but at Jackson, of Argonaut mine disaster fame, a gala day ends tonight with a banquet to newspaper correspondents who covered the story of the tragedy.

Tomorrow the party continues from Malone mine to Sonora and Stockton and back to Sacramento, covering 300 miles of California's most historical and picturesque pioneer gold country which will be linked to the motoring world by the Mother Lode highway.

Residents Ready to Flee From Missouri River Flood

OMAHA, Neb., March 24.—With reports arriving that the swollen Missouri river is rising as new ice gorges form in the river around Homer, Neb., Omaha residents along the riverfront here are laying plans for an immediate evacuation.

A special steam whistle has been arranged by the Western Smelting and Refining company to warn its employes and employes of other firms located at the river front that the danger point has been reached.

At the sounding of the signal all employes have been warned to leave their work and seek higher points.

The river will rise high suddenly, if it does at all, it was said.

Desperate attempts were made to dynamite the ice gorges in the Omaha creek at Homer at an early hour this morning. If the river is not released it is feared that Homer will experience another disaster of 1920 when it was almost completely inundated.

Thousands of hogs killed on the lowlands between Homer and Dakota City, Neb., washed away by the river, according to reports received early this morning.

J. M. Rhoades' Acts As Juror To Come Before Legislature

SACRAMENTO, March 24.—Little did James M. Rhoades, recent secretary of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, dream when, as a juror in the Obenchain trial he stood for acquittal, that his action would come before the state legislature for review.

Yet that is what Assemblyman Otto Emme has programed for Monday, in the lower house, where consideration of the three-fourths jury verdict in criminal cases is under way, the senate having on Thursday passed the constitutional amendment bill to this effect.

Should the assembly pass the bill, a law of far-reaching consequences would be written upon the statute books of California.

"Why hung juries in Los Angeles county courts?" is the query of the solons.

Assemblyman Emme has sent for evidence in the Obenchain jury case, to shed light on the subject.

Meanwhile Senator MacDonald, of San Francisco, has stated he will move for reconsideration of the measure in the upper house, despite the fact that all three judges of the appellate court, third district, have endorsed the amendment.

TIGHTEN NET ROUND RED LEADER

Old Posey, Wounded in Leg, Hides in Mountains From Pursuers

MONTICELLO, Utah, March 24.—Desperately wounded in the leg, "Old Posey," leader of Utah's latest and probably last Indian uprising, was today hiding in the rocks with Bishop's oldest boy as the sole remnant of his little band that last Monday defied the "paleface" law and fled with two prisoners convicted in San Juan county court.

Reports from Bluff and Blanding today stated that the five bucks who late yesterday escaped from their captors had all been rounded up and the main posse very close on the trail of "Old Posey" and Bishop's boy.

"Old Posey" and his companion were forced to leave their horses and camp equipment, so close was the chase, the latest report stated. A Navajo Indian brought the word that "Old Posey" had been badly wounded in the leg. The posse had previously picked up his blanket with two bullet holes through it.

Trail Survivors

With only the pitiful remnant of the band that took the warpath still alive or uncaptured, it was announced that the posse would remain on the trail until the last redman is rounded up or killed.

A general roundup of the Piute tribe was in effect today. Reports from Bluff stated twenty squaws and papooses had been captured and sent there. Forty members of the tribe are in the stockade at Blanding and the five captured in battle are en route there strongly guarded to prevent another escape. They include Posey's little boy, two of Joe Bishop's boys, Old Poke's brother, and Sanup's "Little Boy." The latter is one of the two men convicted in court and whose escape was the start of the trouble.

Fascism Repudiation In U. S. Increasing

NEW YORK, March 24.—Italian language newspapers which have been advocating the formation of Fascisti organizations in the United States today recanted their utterances and repudiated any effort to establish such organizations in the United States.

Simultaneously, the Italian Chamber of Commerce took a flat stand in opposition to any effort to organize Fascisti organizations.

Three influential New York Italian dailies which have strongly urged Fascism in the United States but who are now opposed to it are "Il Progresso" "Il Popolo" and "Corriere D' America." These papers though ardent supporters of Mussolini organization in Italy, have now published editorials opposing Fascisti groups in the United States.

Swift upon the heels of the repudiation of Fascism in the United States by its former influential supporters is the announcement that an anti-Fascisti meeting is to be held tomorrow night in Waterbury, Conn., under the auspices of the American civil liberty union.

Admiral Sims Warns Of Attack by Aircraft

OAKLAND, March 24. — The possibility of enemy warships approaching the Pacific coast and unloosing 600 or 700 airplanes to destroy San Francisco and spread destruction through the state was a warning given at a banquet of the University of California alumni here last night by Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., retired.

He declared that surface fleets are at the mercy of airplanes.

"Only airplanes can fight airplanes," he declared, "and the United States is woefully weak in air forces. If the United States had a couple of thousand airplanes, we would be safe."

Another War Sure To Come, Is Grim Prophecy of Ford

DETROIT, March 24. — "Another war is coming—it is bound to come," was the grim prophecy made by Henry Ford, manufacturer and America's best known pacifist in an interview. But after the "next war," Ford said, America is going to have healthy industry.

Ford declared "big business" must be careful in its public dealings in the future. It must have the people with it; not against it.

"I am a pacifist" said the manufacturer. "Every one knows that, I guess. I am a pacifist, because I loathe war and everything connected with war. But another war is coming. It is bound to come.

"It has to come—to get things settled. It will be a world war. After that war we shall have peace. At least, peace with some understanding. The people—and not the politicians—will rule. The last war was not finished. The wrong people were fighting each other. War is not something we make, it is a judgment and destiny thrust upon us. We are nearly through that phase. The last sands of war are running out.

"And what has this to do with what industry is coming to? After that war we shall have healthy business—big business on such a scale that the world has not seen. These things are facts, sound, basic facts."

HI-Y BOYS WILL CAMP ON ISLAND

Five Day Trip Planned by Glendale and Burbank Y. M. C. A. Members

Headed by Rex Kelley, head of the Glendale branch of the Y. M. C. A., and Howard L. Butterfield, assistant athletic director of the local high school, sixteen members of the Glendale and Burbank Hi-Y societies will leave late Sunday night for a five days' trip to Santa Cruz island. Starting from Glendale at 10:30 o'clock the boys will motor to San Pedro, where they will board a small launch which has been especially chartered for the occasion. Arrival at the island which is located off the coast of Santa Barbara, is expected to be "some time Monday morning."

The expedition constitutes the annual outing which the boys enjoy during the Easter holidays. A strictly "roughing it" schedule will have to be carried out, as Santa Cruz island is noted for little more than hills and desolateness. Hunting and fishing parties will be participated in each day by the youthful mariners.

The return trip is to start next Thursday afternoon, Glendale being announced as the "midnight station" and termination of the journey. The Glendale boys who will take part in the "spree" inclaude Paul Edmonds, Charles Thompson, Marion Morrison, Jack Clarke, Newton McGillis, Harlan McCormick, Tom Woods, John Judd and Angelo Brucker.

In addition to these there will be a half dozen Burbank Hi-Y-ites.

Locates Mystery Man In Girl Murder Case

NEW YORK, March 24.—The New York Evening Journal this afternoon issued an extra edition, featuring the following story:

"Despite denials, evasions and equivocation, The Evening Journal is able to announce that a man giving the name of J. K. Mitchell of Philadelphia, is the same individual who, posing as Mr. Marshall, lavished personal attention and gifts upon Dorothy King, or Keenan, found murdered in her room March 15.

"In disclosing his identity, 'Mr. Marshall' represented himself as a person of large means, spending his time in Philadelphia, Boston and New York City."

GREAT WHITE WAY PLAN OUTLINED

San Fernando Road Club Prepares for Celebration Over New Lights

Fireworks will flare brilliantly and there will be a big carnival on San Fernando boulevard to dedicate the fine new ornamental light standards and fixtures going in there, according to plans formulated at a meeting last night of the San Fernando Boulevard Association, held in the office of L. H. Wilson, 1034 South San Fernando.

The date of the big event will be coincident with the completion, which is expected within two weeks of these fifty concrete standards with "Novalux" twin 250 candle-power lights, being installed "staggered" at eighty foot intervals along San Fernando from Pacific to Los Feliz, at a cost of around $20,000.

Committee at Work

A general committee was appointed to have charge of working out these plans, comprising L. H. Wilson, Charles Griffin, Roy Johnson, William Griffin, Harry Smith, H. S. Cobb, John L. Rondou, Fred A. Barlow and A. M. Salyer.

Committees were also appointed to handle the fireworks end of the big celebration, attend to the publicity and raise the necessary funds.

In this latter connection, $100 has already been raised it is given out. Others are expected to contribute according to their means.

These committees intend to make the affair the biggest thing ever held on the south side of the city, their spokesmen state.

City Camp Ground

Other business of the evening was the petitioning of the City Council to enforce a stricter regulation on private camping grounds and recommended that the city should establish a municipal camp ground. A general discussion regarding the camping ground at San Fernando Road and Riverdale Drive was held and the generai opinion was expressed that this camp as it now is conducted is a public nuisance and should not be allowed to operate without further police and sanitary regulations.

A resolution was passed indorsing the bond election for the purchase of the municipal airport. It was stated that this is a needed thing for the City of Glendale. It also was pointed out that an airport for government and private landing is needed near the city of Los Angeles.

HARDING TO FIX POLICY ON SHIPS

Proposed Modernization of Vessels in U. S. Navy Under Discussion

By H. K. REYNOLDS
For International News Service

WASHINGTON, March 24. — Secretary of State Hughes and Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt agreed today to leave it up to President Harding to decide if the proposed modernization of the eighteen capital ships of the United States navy would constitute a violation of the Washington naval treaty.

An appropriation of $6,500,000 has already been made by congress to elevate the gun turrets of American warsnips, thus increasing their firing range, but the navy is hesitant about proceeding with this work as a result of delicate questions officially raised by the state department in interpreting the treay.

The request for money to start the modernization work was made by the administration on the basis of reliable reports that the gun turrets of British ships had been raised and that the United States was lagging behind.

Great Britain has officially denied, however, that she has increased the firing range of her naval guns; and this denial was followed immediately by retractions from Hughes and Roosevelt.

The question that now confronts the government is whether or not Great Britain will charge the United States with violating the naval limitation treaty of the Washington conference if the navy goes ahead with the program already authorized by congress.

Social Events

Non-Section Unit

One of the most successful accomplishments of Mrs. A. H. Montgomery, first vice-president and chairman of ways and means of the Tuesday Afternoon club, is the organization of the non-section members of the club.

A large majority of the club women are not connected with any of the club sections, and, in order to enlist their interest and support in financing the building and furnishing of the new club house, Mrs. Montgomery was inspired with the idea of forming a non-section group.

The response from the women was most gratifying and this unit of club activity is proving a live addition to Mrs. Montgomery's loyal supporters.

When Mrs W. E. Evans, chairman of the furnishings committee, found that she would not have enough funds to furnish the lounge room, the non-section members came to her aid and pledged $1500 for that purpose.

In meeting this pledge they gave their first big social affair last Saturday, a St. Patrick's day luncheon and card party, which resulted in their realizing $323 of the $1500 pledged.

At the meeting of the non-section women yesterday at the club house, such a large number were in attendance that the meeting was held in the auditorium.

The next benefit affair to be given by the group is a dinner dance, to be given Saturday night, April 7, for the local Shrine club members and their families.

One week from that date the non-section women will arrange a luncheon for the local College Women's club.

Their next big affair for Tuesday Afternoon club members and friends will be the "Carnival of Months," to be given some time in May. In connection with the booths for each month, there will be a program given in the auditorium by the best Scotch talent in California.

Later the non-section members will give a dancing party for young people.

The meeting time of the group has been changed from 2 to 1 o'clock on Friday afternoon, and the next meeting will be next Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Attorney Everson Explains Present Standing of Montgomery Case

The following self-explanatory communication, signed by Attorney John Everson, was brought to The Evening News for publication by George A. Montgomery:

March 22, 1923

Geo. A. Montgomery, Esq.,
500 Kenneth Road,
Glendale, California.

Dear Sir:

Referring to the Case of Montgomery v. Robinson et al: The case is one that is to be tried in Department 1, of the Superior court. Defendants demurred to the complaint, and demurrers are heard in Department 16, and when the case came on for hearing before Department 1, Judge Keetch continued it until the demurrer was passed upon in Judge York's court. As you know, Judge York overruled the demurrer, but he ordered other parties to be brought in, namely: City of Glendale, Elizabeth Jones, J. D. and Bertha M. Ratcliff.

It therefore became necessary for the plaintiff to file a new complaint as it is termed, in other that the exact interest of the new parties should appear in the action. This was done on March 20, and within less time than the law allowed, and on this date an alias summons was issued for the newly made parties, but the service upon the newly made defendants had not been made today when the case came up before Jude Keetch in Department 1; it was therefore continued by agreement, until the summons could be served, and the new issues made up—which will be April 13, 1923. The attorney for the defendants had to be served with a copy of the amended complaint also.

Plaintiffs Ready

The attorneys for the plaintiff have been ready to try the case upon its merits since the inception, and are ready to try it now; but the law allows all parties time to have their side of the controversy presented to the court in an orderly way and in the time which the law allows, and this is the only reason that the case has not already been disposed of, at this time.

There has been no disposition upon the part of the plaintiff's attorneys, nor upon the part of the attorney for the defendants, to put the case off except in the regular and necessary way in order that it may be presented fully upon its merits as soon as it can be reached.

Yours very truly,
JOHN EVERSON.

MUSIC AND BALL IN LEISURE TIME

Postal Employes Rehearse Curves and Crotchets For Amusement

In the intervals of packing around extra sized mail sacks all over town, the employes in the Glendale postoffice are getting out in the alley alongside the building and practicing for the ball games that the postoffice team has scheduled for the next few weeks. Standing up and catching a fast traveling ball seems to appeal to some of the boys as a restful relaxation after a strenuous wrestle with a mule load of letters, while the pitchers are limbering up their arms that have become slightly muscle bound from stuffing letters into mail receptacles over their routes.

The American Legion team will be the next opponents of the postoffice team, and as soon as the mail carriers have whetted their appetites on the veterans they will go after the Harrower nine again, in an effort to run them to death in another carnival of runs around the paths.

Organize Orchestra

Still another activity is taking up some of the spare time of the postoffice staff. They are organizing an orchestra, and already twelve pieces are being taught the rudiments of team work in playing a selection from some of the noted composers. These practices are held in the mezzanine floor of the postoffice, and the reason why the orchestra has been limited to twelve members is because that is all who can crowd into the space with any chance of manipulating their instruments. You know how it is. When a trombone specialist tries to slide the old slip horn back and forward he wants to have all the room there is.

Assistant Postmaster George Hallett tried to jimmy his way into the orchestra with his piccolo, and he came near making the grade when some degraded punster rose to remark that "they usually pick a low person for that work" on any band, so Hallett packed up his little flute and quit in a rage.

Outside of that the band is going along fine, and before long they will be able to finish a piece of music with less than ten bars separating the first and last men under the wire.

HONOR MOUNTAIN SAGE ON EASTER

Naming Mt. McGroarty to Be Part of Services in Verdugo Hills

A pilgrimage and Easter service is to be inaugurated this year similar to that now held at Mt. Roubidoux. A huge cross of concrete is being erected on a high hilltop opposite the town of Tujunga. The spot selected is directly above the home and study of John Steven McGroarty, author of the Mission Play, and poet-philosopher of wide repute.

The occasion will be a double ceremony, as the peak will be named at the same time in honor of Mr. McGroarty, who has long been a resident of Tujunga. It is here that he does his writing, and from here come his kindly bits of philosophy. About him are the neighbors of whom he so often writes—"The man With the Phonograph" the "Postmaster," and other well-known characters. These are all real live people, and long ago they formed a club known as "The Millionaires of Happiness and Contentment," of which Mr. McGroarty is a charter member. It is the belief of the elders of this club that they should do honor to the deserving while they still live to enjoy the tribute, and it is for this reason that they propose to erect the cross and name the hilltop in honor of their best-beloved member.

Overlook Valley

The cross will be of concrete and will be erected on a prominent point overlooking the entire Tujunga valley and San Fernando valley. Flood lights will be placed at the base so that it may be illuminated at night, making it visible for many miles around. It will be unveiled at sunrise Easter morning and the hill officially named.

It is planned to make this event the first of annual sunrise services to be held on this point and the pilgrimage to Mt. McGroarty will hereafter take its place with other institutions of the kind for which southern California is famous and of which it is justly proud. It will be a fitting and permanent observance of the greatest day in the Christian calendar, and the assembled pilgrims will join in reverent song around the cross as the sun breaks forth.

Easter Program at First M. E. Church

Intermediate Department of the First Methodist Episcopal Sunday school will present an Easter program tonight, March 24, at 7:30 o'clock in the social hall of the church.

One feature of the program will be the dramatization of the Easter story by the children of the Sunday school.

As this is a benefit for the Gardena Institute a silver offering will be taken at the close of the program.

ARMY AIR CHIEF MAY SPEAK HERE

C. of C. Directors Plan to Hold Discussion on Glendale Airport

The directors of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, at their meeting last night, decided to issue an invitation to Major General Mason Patrick, head of the United States army aircraft division, to address a meeting here within the next few days, with special reference to the Glendale airport and the necessity that exists for the establishment of an aviation field here. Major General Patrick is planning a visit to Southern California and will be the guest of Alvin W. Makepeace of Pasadena, who has notified the Chamber of Commerce directors of this fact, and it is planned to bring together as many of the local residents as possible to hear Major General Patrick discuss aviation needs, especially as they affect the establishment of landing fields on the Pacific coast.

The directors passed a resolution endorsing the bill that is now before the legislature, and that is sponsored by the Southern California Automobile Club, regulating the license fees to be charged for automobiles, and that will fix the loads of motor trucks, as well as imposing a tax of one cent a gallon on gasoline. This measure, it is declared, will work out more equitably all round than the present system of taxing automobile owners, and it has the support of many organizations throughout the state.

Two new members were admitted to the Chamber of Commerce last night, these being the Winfield Carburetor Co., 114 South Maryland, and the Paseman Floral Shop, 207 East Broadway.

Roy L. Kent, chairman of the postoffice committee, reported on the action taken by the committee to aid in securing the maintenance of the delivery system in the Glendale postoffice at a pitch of efficiency that would permit it to handle the work of the office.

Miss Lila Litch, Graduate of Eastern Schools, Will Play Here

Legion Head Objects To Sale of Magazine

A protest against the sale in Glendale of the "Service Record" is raised by Commander Chalmer D. Day, of the local American Legion post.

The magazine, which is said to be on sale by certain ex-service men in this city, asserts on its title page, "This periodical is not endorsed by the American Legion—and, thank Heaven, we don't want to be!"

It moreover contains on page four a cartoon stated by Commander Day to be very offensive to the Legion.

Commander Day points out that from all appearances the magazine, which is published in Cincinnati, Ohio, is owned and operated by one Victor Norman Miller, of that city.

The Service Record gives as its platform a devotion to "Subjects appertaining to ex-service men, literature, art, science, politics and the photodrama."

The magazine claims on its cover a circulation of over 200,000 and states in its reading matter that it is distributed largely by ex-service men.

Church Fosters Optimism

DOUBT, fear and discouragement are three destructive forces that are abroad in the land. They find their way into every community, every business enterprise and every home at some time or other. They are absolutely without merit, they never help any one. Their mission is to tear down and destroy. They consume the heart that harbors them. They are fatal to any business enterprise. They make enemies of friends. They stir up strife among those who should otherwise dwell together in peace.

The church is trying to supplant these and other destructive forces with faith, optimism and cheer, three partners that work together for good, that constantly build up and make the world better and happier. The church not only fosters faith, optimism and cheer in the community and provides a higher outlook for all who come under its influence either directly or indirectly but it brings these forces to each individual who seeks to rid himself of the doubts and discouragements, the imps of Satan that torment him.

The church helps the individual to supplant his fears with hope and faith.

Tickletoes

TODAY'S SHORT STORY by Ad Schuster

Nate Jennings looked out of the window of his house on a world of soggy snow. Yesterday it had been below zero and the wind had whistled over the Basin, piling and swirling the drifts. He had stuck by the fire reading until late at night and when, before turning in, he had gone to the stables to see that the stock was all right, he felt the warm wind on his neck. Now the snow was melting on the roof, sliding off to fall with a soppy sound below. A Chinook had come, the warm wind of Montana winter. Nate was alone, and he felt the call of spring.

"Just to celebrate the well known breaking of winter's back bone," he said, "I'll wear them new socks I bought in town."

With all the energy of a guardsman shoving a leg in a tight boot, the rancher thrust his into the new hosiery.

"Well, what's the idea of sticking a receipt or an ad inside a feller's sock?" Nate always asked himself questions. This had to do with a crumpled piece of paper upon which his toes had been thrust. He pulled it out, straightened it on his knee and read:

"Continue to be good. Love your work, keep your eyes open to what is doing in the world and you will get what you want.—Tickletoes."

Just a note of a girl in a knitting mill, yet it brought romance in a world which had been desolate. Nate read it over and over, chuckling to himself, "What do you know about that?"

He would go at this thing scientifically, find out who wrote the note. The socks were purchased at the general store in Ubet and the box said they came from a city in Illinois. A tiny sticker bore the words "Inspector No. 9." It was enough. He would go to Illinois, find No. 9, Tickletoes, and—and * * *.The rancher builded dreams in clouds of tobacco smoke while the melting snow dripped from his roof into a gurgling stream which cut a ditch through his garden and to the creek.

After that Tickletoes inhabited the home, a Tickletoes fashioned by the lone man's fancies. For a few weeks he fought the temptation to take a part of his wheat money and go East, then he gave in. Leaving a neighbor in charge of the stock, he went.

In Chicago Nate bought new clothes, then took the train for Rockford and the knitting company. In the big factory his courage almost deserted him. It was larger than he had expected and there were so many girls at work. His story won him permission to go through the plant and he walked along, pretending great interest in complicated machinery which baffled him. At last he found Inspector No. 9.

"This is Miss Anderson, Miss Selma Anderson," his guide informed him, "one of our most capable inspectors."

"Pleased to meetcha, I'm sure," said Nate, his heart leaping at the beauty of the pink and white girl who possessed all the comeliness of the Swedish-American.

Nate stayed in Rockford until he won Selma's consent to marriage and always he held the secret of the note that had reached him in Montana. "I'll surprise her with it when I get there," he told himself.

Ubet gave joyful greeting to man and wife and Selma fell in love at once with the rolling plains and shelves of green. Montana, when the snow is gone and the grape-hued shadows lift and fall in the distant saw-toothed ranges, is a land of wonder and challenge. The young wife breathed deeply and held out her arms.

"I feel," she said, "like a pioneer and I know I am going to be happy!"

And she was happy. She made the house over to suit herself, gave names to the chickens and animals, and waited each noon and evening for Nate to ride in from the fields.

"You like it all!" It was time, Nate decided, for the secret. "You do like it, don't you, Tickletoes?"

"Tickletoes?" said Selma. "Why do you call me that?"

After Nate had told the story and had shown her the crumpled paper Selma sighed. "I'm sorry," she said, "I wish it had been I, but—well I had been Number 9 but one week when you came to the factory!"

They are still the happiest young couple in all the Ubet country and yet sometimes Nate wonders what the real Tickletoes looks like and Selma, as she works, frowns as she catches herself being the least bit jealous.

Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters, M.D.

SPIRITUALITY VS MATERIALITY

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

"Dear Doctor:

"Will you please tell me the best method of helping a baby two and one-half years old to break himself of the habit of thumb sucking which unfortunately, I have let progress too far. His little mouth is beginning to get mis-shaped and his front teeth are protruding. I have used such means as bitter medicines, adhesive tape, etc. But all to no avail. His thumb is often festered but this does not stop him.

"I expect a new baby soon so please advise me what to do immediately in case the new baby starts sucking his thumb. Mrs. D"

I give this letter almost in its entirety because it has a warning in it to mothers who do not realize the gravity of thumb sucking. We have an article giving full directions how to make a splint, which any of you can have by sending an s. a. s. e. to me in care of this paper and asking for it.

Until you get that you can make a good splint by taking a piece of cardboard long enough to extend nearly to the arm pit and to the wrist, and wide enough to extend around the arm and lap over a little bit. Tie this on over the little shirt, pulling the cuff down and then turning it back over the cardboard, and pinning it there. This permits free movement at the wrist and shoulder but not at the elbow, so that it is impossible to get the hand to the mouth.

The secret of success in this splinting method is to keep the splints on night and day until the child has forgotten the habit. It is inconvenient and somewhat disagreeable for the child at the time but not nearly so inconvenient and disagreeable as a deformed mouth and thumb will be if the thumb-sucking habit is persisted in.

You had better see a dentist about your little boy's teeth now for most dentists advise straightening the first teeth so the jaws will develop right. They do not wait until the second teeth come in.

Naturally, it is far easier to correct that habit of thumb sucking in the beginning than it is later. For a tiny baby you can buy little aluminum mittens. They are large enough so that they cannot get them into their mouths. With the older children the splints are better. It is the experience of most mothers that putting things on the thumb is not effective.

I am sure you will not let the little one that is coming establish the habit. It looks cunning to see a baby sucking its thumb and I have seen proud parents have their baby's picture taken in this position. The effects, however, are far from cunning. In fact, they may be very serious, as this mother is beginning to see.

Mrs. S.:—The best medicine for a torpid liver is a correct diet and some vigorous exercise. A correct diet would mean enough protein to supply your repair needs and your growth if under maturity (250 to 350 C's), a goodly amount of the mineral elements and vitamins, a quart or two of water besides what you drink with your meals, and enough fat and carbohydrates (starches and sugars) for your energy needs. In percentages it is estimated that about 10 per cent should be protein, 25 per cent fat, and the balance carbohydrates.

A quart of milk or skim milk or buttermilk, with a goodly amount of greens and a big green leaf salad, and some fruits, every day are foods that should not be omitted.

We have a list of foods with their caloric values which you can have if you are overweight or underweight. Perhaps you had better include four cents in stamps with your s. a. s. e. and send for the pamphlet on gaining and losing. That has the list.

Beauty Chats

by Edna Kent Forbes

OUR FRIENDS, THE CALORIES

Recently we have been neglecting an important part in any discussion of beauty—that is, scientifically correct diet. Now if you are too fat or thin, or if you have a bad complexion or any other troubles which are due to improper feeding (an extraordinary number of our troubles are due to this), there are two ways you can set about a cure. One is a hit-or-miss method of eating new things and watching the result; the other is learning how to diet scientifically.

The theory of calories had a great vogue; then, like all vogues, dropped out of favor and was replaced by a new enthusiasm. But the other day a well-known scientist declared that the proof that "foods are oxidized in the body in accordance with well established laws of combustion" ranked only a little behind Newton's discovery of the law of gravitation. The proof of the heating values of food came from Lavoisier, the great scientist of France, who lost his life during the French Revolution.

A candle containing the elements of carbon and hydrogen is converted to carbon dioxide and water when it is burned, and it gives off heat. Foods containing carbon and hydrogen are burned in the body and turn into carbon dioxide and water and also produce heat. There is no use going too deeply into the technicalities of a highly technical subject. It is enough to say that it has been proved that definite amounts of food, just like definite amounts of coal or any other heat-making substance, always produce definite quantities of heat.

The scientists had to have some unit to measure this heat, just as earlier discoverers had to have the foot and the inch to measure length and the pound to measure weight, so they called the unit of heat the calorie. They found that the average man gave out approximately 2,700 calories of heat in twenty-four hours. Therefore, they know he would need to take in about 2700 calories every day—if he was an average man.

Angel C.:—The size of the bust may be increased by building up all the muscles of the chest through deep breathing. Dress so any lack of development is not noticed, and if you are below normal weight, gain through drinking plenty of milk.

Jean C. S.:—If you have adenoids they should be removed or treated for the sake of your health, even though they do spoil the shape of your nose, which is unlikely. By all means consult a doctor about your condition.

Frances:—You must be mistaken about borac acid being used on the skin to ward off lines. It would have the opposite effect if used to any great extent, for while it is very cleansing it is also very drying.

L. T.:—When using kid curlers merely dampen the hair with water and let hair remain on the curlers until it has dried thoroughly. The mucilage curling fluid is only used for making ringlets and then they are fastened into shape and remain during the time of drying.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So, if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

Book Reviews

Patrons of the Glendale Branch library on South Brand boulevard and Los Feliz road will be interested in the following list announced by Charles H. Cushing, librarian.

"Revolt Against Civilization" by Lothrop Stoddard, concerning the crisis the world is facing today. He tells of recent scientific investigations and how they have established the fact that the most superior people of the race are barely reproducing themselves, while the inferior and degenerate classes are multiplying with great rapidity. He cites the science of applied biology or eugenics, as the solution to the problem.

Other books by Stoddard are "Rising Tide of Color" and "New World of Islam," showing the danger of the white race being supplanted by the colored ones if steps are not taken by the former to perpetuate itself through eugenics.

On the library shelves are also a set of books on "The Eugenic Marriage," by W. Grant Hague of Columbia University.

Fiction books are: "Seven Wives of Bluebeard" by Anatole France; "Dawn of the Morning," by Lutz; "The Heart of Unaga" by Cullum; "Town and Gown" by Montrosse; "Tawi Tawi" by Dodge.

"Brassbounder" by Bone; "Hall and Grange" by Marshall; "The Pest" by Terhune; "Towards Morning" by Wylie; "Two Shall Be Born" by Oemler; "Changing Winds" by Irvine; "Court of Belshazzar" by Williams; "Hunting Tower" by Buchan; and "The Best Short Stories of 1922" edited by O'Brien.

Among the non-fiction books are "Our Hawaii" by Charmian London; "Alaska the Great Country" by Ella Higginson; "Three Acres and Liberty" by Bolton Hall; "Service Station Management" by Jones; and "Putnam's Handy Map Book.'

Side Talks

by Ruth Cameron

SHALL WE TALK LETTERS?

"Do you like to write letters?"

"No, but I love to get them."

I'll wager that if I asked ten people the above question I would get the above answer from at least seven of them.

I think it was one of Jane Austen's characters who said that Heaven was a place where one got letters by every post and never had to write them.

I wonder if there is one person among those who are reading this at this moment who, as he reads, doesn't think guiltily: "Speaking of writing letters, I must write—"

Maybe it's only one letter. But if you are a deep-dyed villain (like R. C.) it is probably a half dozen letters that are lying somewhere in your desk reproaching you. Every day you have promised yourself that you would write those letters today, and every day some things that absolutely had to be done have crowded that less pressing duty into the background of tomorrow.

The Labor of Writing

Even if the friend who writes is very dear, even if you would be simply bubbling over with things to say to her if she were present, still the effort of putting those things down on paper appeals you.

Which brings me to what I started to say. We were talking about writing letters last night and a friend of mine prophesied that the day would come before long when, instead of writing letters, we would talk into a machine which would record what we said on a piece of paper. Then when we had finished, we would unroll that paper, stick it in an envelope and send it to our friend. He, in turn, would put it on some form of talking machine which would reproduce the words we had spoken.

Sounds jolly, don't you think?

Hard At First

And yet, when it comes, I'll wager that a lot of people will find it hard to make use of it. Fancy talking away to a machine that makes no answer, but simply buzzes along recording what we say. We shall wonder if what we say is worth recording. It will take quite a lot of imagination to visualize the friend who is to listen. And, of course, we shall be afraid of seeming ridiculous. But by and by we shall probably come to do it as easily as we talk into the telephone (which, as everyone who ever had a party line on which there was a chronic telephone visitor can testify, is very easy).

And we shall feel as aggrieved when we have to communicate with someone who has no recording machine and we have to do it by the old-fashioned method of writing, as we do now, when we have to reach some friend who hasn't yet gotten a telephone.

This, Too, Shall Pass?

And then, when we have gotten used to that method of letter writing and are thinking how far ahead of our ancestors we are, and feeling sure that the art of communication has reached its ultimate refinement, who knows but what the scientists who are studying all the marvels that are tied up in the subject of vibrations and wave lengths, may not find out some way in which we can send our thoughts directly through the atmosphere to the person we want to reach.

If they do, let's hope they discover some way to protect oneself against these thoughts when one wants privacy.

Aunt Annie:—Here is my recipe for Cowboy Sour Dough Bread: Fill a two-gallon jar half full of warm water and stir in flour to make a stiff batter. Let stand in a warm place till fermentation takes place and the batter rises to the top of the jar. This will take about twelve hours. It is then ready for use. Take one quart of flour, one tablespoon of salt, one teaspoon of baking soda and a small handfull of sugar if liked; sift these dry ingredients together several times and then spread them in the bottom of a large mixing bowl. Pour over this one-quarter of the amount of sour dough in the jar, and kneed in all of the flour in the bottom of the bowl. Then pinch off pieces the size of an egg, roll each piece in melted butter and place in a well-greased dipping pan—as if you were making biscuits. Let rise fifteen minutes and bake brown in a quick oven. You will find these a delicious change from the ordinary light bread. Add more warm water and flour to the sour dough each time you bake. When it becomes very sour put it in a cool place. In warm weather use cold water for mixing. Let the biscuits rise before baking, each time."

Mrs. D.:—"My Best Cake Recipe: It is called 'Never Fail Angel Food Cake' Beat the whites of 11 eggs very stiff (of course all these eggs make it expensive, but it can be used on occasion, for a guest supper). Sift one and one-half cups of sugar seven or eight times. Now sift together eight times one cup of flour, a pinch of salt and one-fourth teaspoon of cream of tartar. Add these dry ingredients, in very small quantities, to the stiffly-whipped egg-whites, taking care to beat them in. When all the dry ingredients have been mixed with the egg-whites, add one teaspoon of vanilla extract, then pour the batter gently into a well-floured angel food pan. (No shortening is used in this cake—not even on the pan. Milk and water are not used in it either.) This recipe makes a good-sized cake. Bake it 40 to 50 minutes in a very moderate oven."

AUTOMOBILE SECTION

CHANCE FOR ACCIDENTS SMALLER

Death Rate From Crashes Shows Decline, According To Recent Study

Life insurance companies point to the increasing death rate for automobile accidents. In 1922, in proportioun to population, the number of automobile fatalities was higher than ever. But the great and encouraging fact from the standpoint of motorists is that accidents are not increasing as rapidly as motor vehicles. Per automobile on the road, fatal accidents are nearly fifty per cent fewer today than they were in 1914.

If you were an owner or an operator of an automobile in 1914, the chance was one in 356 that your car would be involved in a fatal accident. In 1922, the chance against you was but one in 800. Though the total number of automobile fatalities has shown a steady progress for the last eight years, the death rate per automobile has shown just as steady a decline.

What Study Shows

According to a study just completed, in 1915 one out of every 453 automobiles figured in a fatal accident; in 1916, one out of 468; 1917, one in 503; 1918, one in 670; 1919, one in 675; 1920, one in 780; 1921, one in 795, and 1922, one in 800.

Recent investigations have shown that probably as high as 75 per cent of all automobile accidents are due to worn brakes and brakes improperly applied, which is to say that this year 11,000 of the 15,000 probably automobile fatalities could be prevented if motorists would give proper attention to their brakes.

Adjust Your Brakes!

There are at least a dozen rules on the subject of brakes, which, if rigidly followed, would do much toward keeping the motorist out of jail or the hospital. If the owners and operators of automobiles in America could be convinced of the necessity of adjusting brakes every thirty days, keeping brakes on both sides operating with equal pressure, using the motor as a brake, on hills, applying brakes slowly, and always allowing liberal margins of safety—if these might be the lessons for the year, the automobile might be removed from the list of important agents of death.

Motor Thefts In Honolulu Are Far Between, Is Claim

HONOLULU, March 24.—Motor car thieves in Hawaii are distinctly in the minority. The reason for their non-activity is not because of any scarcity of motor cars, but because once they have stolen a car they find that they have no place to go.

The islands are so small that there is an almost constant check on all motor cars, and thievery, therefore, is rather an unprofitable venture.

Unable to take a whole car, Honolulu thieves have devised a plan of removing the plate glass windows by slashing the back curtains. Several cases of this kind have been reported to the police recently.

Plan to Move Gas Stations Across Line

PHOENIX, Ariz., March 24.—The border towns of California and New Mexico are due for a boom when the new 3-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax goes into effect in Arizona.

Concretely stated, there is expectation that all the gasoline stations in Yuma will be moved over to the California side of the Colorado river, where the traveler, or the Arizonan, may fill his tank and a few extra cans, thus securing economy and showing resentment over the enactment of the latest tax on travel.

Motor tradesmen in Arizona have been figuring they already are taxed about $40 federal war levy on each new car, at least $20 extra on freight, $25 a year property tax on the average car, $10 for a license plate and now about $15 a year more for their gasoline. They insist it is entirely too much of a burden on a single industry, and that it smacks of discrimination.

FAR-REACHING OIL CAN

An oil-can can be made to reach into far places by attaching a piece of wire to its spout. This is done by forcing the end of the spout through a cork, and setting the wire into the cork, alongside the spouting. When a drop of oil comes out it flows along the wire to the farther end.

HERE'S A TIRE TIP

Extreme care should be taken to see that nothing on the car scrapes the tires as they revolve.

SECRETS OF GAS ENGINE REVEALED

Many Motorists Ignorant of Powerful Agency That Car Contains

By B. D. MOSES
Agricultural Engineering Division, University of California

The gasoline automobile has become such a standard commodity that nowadays it is nothing uncommon for people to run an automobile or truck, or even a tractor, without any idea at all of what is going on within the machine. Our wives and sisters step into the car, start the self-starter, open the throttle and "hit it up" along the highway at forty miles an hour, without any thought at all of fear, or appreciation of what a powerful servant they are managing.

Let's consider briefly a few interesting facts about the automobile:

In the first place, the automobile engine turns over at a speed of from 1,500 to 2,000 R. P. M. (revolutions per minute), sometimes higher, and during this time gasoline is taken from a tank in the liquid form, vaporized, mixed with air in the proper proportions, ignited by an electric spark, exploded, expanded, pushed out by the cylinder and another charge taken in.

Gas Must Work Fast

If the engine turns at 2,000 R. P. M., it takes 3-50 of a second for this complete cycle of operations, the gas has 1-50 of a second to get into the cylinders and about 1-40 of a second to get out, or about the time required for a weight to fall 1-8 of an inch, from rest.

Another illustration of time required is found in advancing the spark. We start the engine with the lever in retard and advance it as the engine gets up to speed. This simply means that, instead of lighting the gas on head end dead center, we advance it and light it 1-600 of a second earlier, and, by so doing, the power may be increased even as much as 20 per cent.

The fact that such a brief interval of time makes such a material difference in the engine's operation calls forth our hearty admiration for the timing system.

What the Coils Do

There are not many of us who have the courage to even put a finger into an ordinary 110-volt light socket, but the spark plug

Boy of 8 Years Traffic Officer; Does Good Work

MALDEN, Mass., March 24.—Only eight years old and the youngest traffic officer in the world. This distinction is held by Joe McArthur, 8 years old, of Willow place.

When the senior officers are having their relief periods Joe never misses an opportunity to be in the center of the busy business squares to direct the heavy traffic. The youth has become a first class traffic officer and his instructions are followed carefully by truckmen and other drivers.

Ever since the lad was able to walk it has been his ambition to become a cop.

Recently he was given a helmet and lost no time in adding other things to his wardrobe, until now he has a complete policeman's outfit.

CLUB WOULD TAX USERS OF ROADS

Plans to Maintain State Highways Outlined to Legislature

Placing the burden of taxation directly upon the users of the highways for road maintenance as well as Motor Vehicle department maintenance, the board of directors of the Automobile Club of Southern California, representing thousands of auto owners in this part of the state, has definitely outlined its policy for California legislation at the present session of the legislature.

It is indicated that the Automobile Club will recommend to the legislature the following action at the present session. No change is indicated in the present fees to be paid by motor vehicle owners prior to February 1, 1924, but vital changes in the fee system would occur at that time for the purpose of raising a fund not to exceed $15,000,000.

The question of the weight of motor vehicles using the highways is an important one considered by club directors. Here is the resolution as it was just passed:

Policy Outlined

"It was moved, seconded and unanimously carried that the Board of Directors of the Automobile Club of Southern California, being duly assembled for the purpose of deciding and declaring the recommendations of this club concerning legislation pending at the present session of the California legislature, do hereby declare the following to be the policies which this club respectfully recommends to the legislature that it follow at the present session with regard to motor vehicle taxation, highway construction and maintenance:

First—No new mileage should be added to the state highway system at the present session of the legislature. In other words, it is the policy of the club that the state should assume no new commitments while its present road building projects are uncompleted.

Second—State highway construction work should be paid for by bond issue or legislative appropriation. None should be provided for at this session as the state now has road contracts in excess of $16,000,000. We believe these contracts will fully occupy the highway commission's attention and we do not favor the raising of additional funds for construction during 1923.

Third—State highway maintenance work and reconstruction should be paid for by motor vehicle owners through fees or indirect taxes.

Fourth—All fees raised directly or indirectly from motor vehicle owners should be placed in one fund—the Motor Vehicle fund, which should be divided equally between the state and counties after the Motor Vehicle department expenses are paid therefrom. This is the division provided for by law at the present time.

Fifth—There should be no change in the fees paid by motor vehicle owners prior to February 1, 1924; the fees to be paid by motor vehicle owners during the year beginning February 1, 1924, should not exceed $15,000,000.

Sixth—The fees to be paid by each individual motor vehicle owner should be based upon the damage caused by his vehicle to the highways and should take into consideration two factors—weight and mileage.

Favor Weight Tax

We believe that such fees should not at the present time exceed $2.00 as a registration fee and one cent per gallon as a motor fuel tax and that the balance should be raised by a weight tax. We believe that the registration fee proposed would yield approximately $2,000,000 per year and that the proposed motor fuel tax would raise approximately $6,-

RIGHT TURN FAVORED IN CANADA

English Rule of Going to Left Abolished; Notes of General Interest

American traffic rules are penetrating to Canada. The English rule of "turn to the left" has been abolished in all provinces except Prince Edward's island and Nova Scotia. New Brunswick is the latest province to conform to the American plan of "turn to the right." This change has been made to check automobile accidents, many of which were caused by tourists unfamiliar with this antique English custom.

National Fuel

A scientific committee of the Institute of France, which has been investigating fuels for combustion engines, reports that a mixture of alcohol and gasoline is the probable "national fuel" for motor engines. This mixture of alcohol and gasoline, ranging from 10 to 50 per cent of alcohol, is now being tested on a large scale by numerous industries.

Many in Michigan

Michigan has one automobile to every 6.3 persons, according to figures made public by the secretary of state. A total of 578,980 pleasure cars were licensed in the state during 1922, an increase of 35 per cent over 1921. Wayne county (Detroit) heads the automobile census by counties with 148,424.

Dealers Increase

There are now 40,889 automobile and motor truck dealers in the United States. Of these 2485 are in cities with populations between 100,000 and 500,000, 8192 are in cities with populations between 10,000 and 100,000, while 26,371, or more than half the total, are in small towns having a population of less than 10,000.

Lot of Money

Motor vehicle owners in this country paid the states in registration fees a grand total of $151,137,538 during 1922. In New York the aggregate fees were $12,718,074 and in Pennsylvania $12,531,582.

STOPPING CAR ON ROAD IS MENACE

Proper Law Is Great Need to Prevent Accidents, Says Auto Club

Day by day, in many a way, California is improving its motor laws, point out officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California. And there are thousands of auto owners who are offering up thanks for the fact.

One of the laws which Auto Club officials hope to see changed at the present session of the Legislature is that one governing the stopping of cars on the highways of the state. At the present time the law provides that no vehicle undergoing repair or for the purpose of camping shall stop on the road. There is nothing said at the present time about a man stopping his car in the middle of the road to chat with a friend or to buy vegetables or for any other purpose than repairing or making a camp.

Many acidents which have been caused by motorists halting their cars in unexpected places on the road have not been prosecuted because the law did not make it illegal to stop there.

Need Proper Law

The Auto Club has from time to time issued appeals to car drivers to use thoughtfulness for the welfare of others in stopping their cars and to a large extent this has been of some avail, but with the coming of spring and the appearance of scores of fruit and vegetable stands along the roads the situation is almost getting out of control.

It is hoped by the majority of motorists that at this time next year there will be a proper law providing for the keeping of highways clear so that traffic may flow easily and freely. There are many other improvements in the motor vehicle regulations which would be of interest to motorists, point out club officials, if auto owners would just take an interest in what is being done for their benefit at this time in Sacramento.

LEATHER CONE CLUTCH

When a leather-covered cone clutch sticks badly and becomes hard to release, pour gasoline over it repeatedly, letting it in and out, using every possible means to clean it thoroughly. Then let it dry for several hours and apply neatsfoot oil on the leather. Block it out over night so that the pressure from the spring will not squeeze out the oil.

Take Your Time When On Spring Auto Tour! There's No Need To Hurry

NOW that the snow is melting on the mountains and the mocking bird is singing in the valleys, while a delicate fragrance of plum, apricot and orange blossoms is in the air, and the sight of those flowering hillsides is a glorious thing—once more comes the lure of the open road!

"Are you prepared?"

That is a question which presupposes a knowledge of how to prepare, a supposition not borne out by the facts, which are that many motorists set out on their spring trips in varying degrees of non-preparation that would be funny if they were not serious.

Among the things to check up on before starting are—condition of the car in general (if not right, put it right); condition of the tires (poor tires take the edge off motoring); equipment (gas, water and oil "emergency set" is oftentimes a friend in need, and a complete set of tools, including "digging out" shovel, should be carried, while a camping outfit can be obtained at a very reasonable price and will provide more real motoring joy than all the hotels from here to New York).

But, above all things, in planning your automobile trip this spring, map your route well in advance, without time schedules—and don't hurry.

What good is accomplished by dashing madly across the country, only to arrive caked in dust, breathless and thoroughly out of sorts? You might better stay at home and see it in the movies!

Hard and fast rules of covering a certain number of miles a day rob motoring of one of its chief pleasures, that of lolling along, stopping here and there to enjoy some particularly delightful spot that is ninety-nine times out of a hundred far more alluring than the day's proposed destination.

Moreover, there should not be the strain of trying to maintain a certain schedule. What is the good of a spring vacation, if you aren't going to relax? Adhering to a schedule leaves you more worn out at the end of the trip than at the start. If you do not believe this is so, ask any locomotive engineer or stage-driver. He will tell you how he feels at night, after maintaining a grinding speed all day, in order to keep up the schedule for which he earns his pay. Who is paying YOU for maintaining your schedule?

Make enjoyment, not miles, the object of your automobile vacation.

Consider Motor Legislation In Spirit Of Co-operation

By GIL A. COWAN
Special to The Evening News

SACRAMENTO, March 24.—Considerations of motor vehicle legislation before the senate and assembly committees during the passing week have been most interesting, definitely developing a spirit of co-operation between the various interests who use the streets and highways.

loads will be limited on motor trucks to about twelve tons, which is too much, but a step in the right direction in view of the large number of carriers now crushing the pavements under fifteen ton loads.

The motor bus operators have agreed to bring their machines within the 102-inch width limit and thereby give a little more room to the family flivver, while the country delegates have expressed their disapproval to the scheme which will prohibit children from motoring to school.

To one unaccustomed with legislation, the efforts of the committee in bringing out a bill which satisfies all presents a spectacle of Houdini unloosing himself from a straitjacket in midair. The representatives of the Automobile Club of Southern California, the California Automobile Association, the Motor Carriers' Association, the farm bureau delegates, the

RAIL, MOTOR CRASHES ON DECREASE

Newspapers, Auto Clubs and Schools Get Credit for Good Safety Work

The number of fatalities resulting from accidents to automobiles at grade crossings on Southern Pacific lines, Pacific System, was reduced 7 per cent in 1922, as compared with 1921, according to a report just made public by R. J. Claney, assistant to the general manager. There was a decrease of ten per cent in the number of grade crossing accidents per 1000 registered automobiles.

The decrease is attributed to the co-operation of the press, automobile clubs, schools, churches and chambers of commerce with the Southern Pacific Company.

Autos Increase

The number of registered automobiles in the six states traversed by Southern Pacific lines increased from 888,945 in 1921 to 1,115,945 in 1922. With an increase of 25.5 per cent in the number of registered automobiles, as a result of this co-operative effort there was a 10 per cent decrease in accidents per 1000 registered automobiles.

There were 953 accidents in 1922 compared with 846 in 1921, resulting in fifty-three deaths and 316 injuries compared with fifty-seven deaths and 283 injuries in 1921.

There was a reduction in 1921 of 7 per cent in the number of fatalities while the increase in the number injured is relatively less than the increase in the number of licensed machines.

Disregard Signals

Chief among the principal causes of grade crossing accidents are: Failure of motorists to heed warning signals, carelessness of recklessness, failure to look in both directions and listen before attempting to cross railroad tracks, inexperience of drivers resulting in stalled engines while attempting to shift gears, defective brakes, attaining a momentum approaching a railroad track beyond the braking power of their machines if necessary to stop, and mind distracted by conversation with other occupants of the machine at the critical time of crossing railroad tracks.

No doubt a mistake in pressing accelerator when intending to press brake has occasioned some of the accidents involving skidding or running into trains and running through and breaking down crossing gates.

FAVORS DRIVER'S TEST

The traffic committee of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce will take the initiative or will co-operate with any organization in Pennsylvania to have laws enacted at the next session of the legislature compelling the driver of any motor-driven vehicle to undergo a rigid examination to show that he or she is mentally and physically fit.

WORKING OF GAS ENGINE IS TOLD

Many Motorists Ignorant of Powerful Agency Contained in Car

uses an electric current of 12,000 to 15,000 volts. This may not sound reasonable, but the coils used in the gas engine actually transform the low voltage either from batteries or magnetos from less than ten volts to the astonishing figure given above.

Every time there is an explosion within the cylinder, there is a momentary pressure of from somewhere near 200 pounds to 500 pounds per square inch; 300 pounds may be taken as an average. Now, 300 pounds pressure acting on a four-inch piston means a force of 3,768 pounds. In other words, in a four-cylinder engine turning over at 2,000 R. P. M., there are 4,000 blows of nearly two tons each struck on the crank shaft each minute.

The carburetor on the above engine would be called up to measure out most accurately 4,000 doses of gasoline to the cylinders of approximately one-fourth of a drop each, and the wonderful thing about this lies in the fact that, if this amount be either doubled or halved without making a proportional change in the quantity of air, the engine will not only misbehave, but will most likely fail to work altogether.

Gas Beats Dynamite

Gasoline is fourteen or fifteen times as powerful as dynamite, and if we neglect friction, it is interesting to note that if one pound of gasoline could be mixed with the proper amount of air and exploded instantaneously, there would be sufficient power developed to throw a one-ton weight over a mile high.

In other words, ten gallons of gasoline in the fuel tank has the ability to blow your automobile 100 miles up into the air. Of course, the main difference existing between gasoline and dynamite lies in the fact that the dynamite is ready to explode immediately, while gasoline has to have the conditions so arranged as to permit rapid combustion.

Nevertheless, if more of us realized what the gasoline engine was really doing in our automobiles, how fast and accurately the ignition system works and with what precision the carburetor doles out the fuel to the engine and the wonderful power that we have stored as a clear liquid in our fuel tank, we would undoubtedly have more respect for our machine.

Southern California is soon to have thrown open to the public, a new industry. It already has an Ostrich Farm and an Alligator Farm,—now comes the Lion Farm. As a means of producing revenue, it is not likely to have very much competition, while, as a thrill-producer, it is in a class by itself.

Charles Gay, who has spent most of his life with wild animals in circuses and zoos, has chosen this novel means of earning a livelihood in the Southland. He says that the semi-tropical climate here makes conditions ideal for raising lion cubs. So far he has had remarkable success, and his farm has over forty specimens, from two-weeks'-old babies to the majestic King of the Forest.

Among his collection are several movie actors, which are as playful as kittens. They have been used in several productions recently, and when the occasion demands, can assume as fierce expressions as their brothers in Africa.

Marines Visit Farm

Last week a party of U. S. Marines drove out to the farm in an Essex touring car. During the exhibition of some of his untamed varieties, Mr. Gay inquired of the Marines as to their abilities as lion tamers, and explained that he had a pen full of babies that could be handled like house cats.

There was no lack of volunteers to pose for a picture, and soon half a dozen squirming kittens were giving as many Marines enough work for a regiment.

"Keep 'em still," said the photographer, "this isn't a moving picture." "You'd might as well try to hold a hand full of snakes," was the reply, "It can't be done."

When the camera clicked, Sergeant Spencer said, "Now, let's go back and pose with Princess Pat." There was a general rush for the Essex. "Let's go home," was all anyone said.

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Cal., March 24.—Authority to restrict or prohibit travel over any road in Yosemite National Park when, in the opinion of the superintendent, road conditions are unsuitable for travel, has been given the superintendent of Yosemite National Park in a revision of the rules and regulations just approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

Under this provision, Superintendent Lewis is equipped to take such action as may be necessary to protect the roads from damage and the park from unfavorable advertising by stunts performed before the roads are ready for visitors.

MOTOR LAWS ARE BEING OUTLINED

Proposed Legislation Taken Up for Discussion in Spirit of Harmony

Peace Officers' Association, the Traffic Officers' League, all represent the steel stays which the legislators must wriggle around and whip into words their various ideas.

Making general laws for California is indeed a difficult problem and especially so in the matter of motor regulation. In some communities, sparsely settled, the element of speed does not enter into thought. They only look for highways on which to speed. In the cities where traffic is not directed by corner policemen, speed must be curbed. In the congested districts it is the officers' desire to get motorists out of the jam as hastily as possible.

It was interesting to note the appeal made by several of the cities that they share in part of the revenue to be derived from the proposed two cent gasoline tax. Of course, the county supervisors' speaker came right back with the statement that if it were not for the highways leading into the cities the latter would suffer more than the pecuniary gain.

And so on it goes, each side taking issue over every point, the whole thing expected to benefit the public, and the motorist ever ready to pay the price of peace, even to forfeiting bail in misdemeanor cases rather than fighting the charge.

Tests for drivers' licenses probably will be instituted hereafter, but even this affords no protection, it would seem. The plan to record all arrests and convictions on the back of the license also is considered prejudicial to the interests of the person who is so unfortunate as to be picked up too often by our over zealous traffic officers.

The writer was particularly interested in a motor trip through San Francisco made by the state legislature, accompanied by traffic officers. All regulations were disregarded and the parade passed through the heart of the city without a mishap. That was proof positive that controlled speed is much preferable to legal limitations.

Such has been found true in Chicago and New York. California might benefit by this experience, especially in the congested areas of Los Angeles county.

NEW SALES HEAD WITH PACKER CO.

R. L. Conover Is Appointed Sales Manager for Local Agency

The addition of Robert L. Conover to the sales force of the Packer Auto Co., 245 South Brand boulevard, to fill the position of sales manager, is announced by Steve Packer, who adds that the effect of Mr. Conover's personality and wide experience in the selling of Studebaker automobiles is already beginning to have a marked effect on the business of the local agency.

Mr. Conover comes here from Seattle and Everett, Wash., where he was engaged in selling Studebakers for the past nind years, and where, for the past three years, he held the position of sales manager in one of the leading agencies in the North. His intimate knowledge of every model of the Studebaker line, coupled with his experience of the firm's methods of doing business, have made him a Studebaker enthusiast, and his work for the Packer agency is expected to exercise an important influence in local motoring circles.

He has already launched an aggressive selling campaign based on methods that he has found effective in the other cities where he has been in business, and other plans will be put into effect within a short time that are expected to increase materially the turnover in the local Studebaker headquarters.

as Price Fixing Is Denounced by Board

DETROIT, March 24. — A demand for a thorough investigation of gasoline price fixing in the United States and strong government support for the development of crude rubber plantations were the outstanding features of the American Automobile Association executive board meeting held in Detroit this week.

George C. Diehl of Buffalo, president of the A. A. A., presided at the session. M. O. Eldridge, executive chairman, reported on the recent investigation by the United States senate committee which looked into gasoline price fixing.

There was strong evidence of collusion in the fixing of gasoline prices, the report said, despite the fact that oil companies denied any such attempts. The executive board adopted a resolution recommending the United States Attorney-General take steps to prosecute those responsible for the price fixing.

Improper adjustment of valves will cause jerky running of the car.

NUMBER OF AUTO THEFTS REDUCED

Chicago Police Records for 1922 Show Decline in Robberies

CHICAGO, March 24.—Despite tart criticism of certain methods practiced by the police of Chicago in handling motor car thefts the bluecoats of this city are more than elated over the report made by the Chicago Crime Commission for 1922. Automobile stealing here has declined 41 per cent in a year, according to the report.

Police consider the problem of auto thefts second to no other branch of their work.

Records show that 90 per cent of the persons arrested in connection with more serious offenses have been implicated at some time in auto thefts. Police believe that an "iron hand" rule in such offenses means more than a possible reduction of the number of machines stolen—it frequently constitutes the "stitch in time" to prevent many youths of the city from "going bad." The arrest and punishment of a "pal," police theorize, will not infrequently hold in check another boy who might otherwise try his hand at stealing a car.

Guard Parked Cars

The system of parking machines inside a guarded compound has proven highly successful, the report of the commission shows. Theft of automobiles from parking spaces of that character has been reduced in Chicago by 67 per cent in a year.

The Chicago system of reporting automobile thefts will probably soon be radically changed, it was said by police. The present system was described by the commission in its report as "cumbersome, top-heavy and contains a great deal of duplication of effort."

Courts Helping

Chicago courts are lending a helping hand in the effort to eliminate this variety of crime, the commission report advised. Prosecution of such thieves is becoming more stern.

A number of recommendations are being prepared for consideration by both the police and judiciary departments of the city, which it is promised by the Crime Commission, will make the going still rougher for the Chicago automobile thief.

STAR SALES JUMP TO THIRD PLACE

Demand for Car in First Year of Existence Surprises Dealer

In the year that it has been on the market the sales of the Star car in Southern California have jumped from fifth to third place in the number of cars actually delivered to buyers according to C. A. Dilley, of Dilley & Armstrong, 115 West Harvard, distributors of the Star in this territory. This, he claims, establishes a record of which any automobile organization may well be proud, and he predicts that the Star will make an even more notable advance in the coming year.

Mr. Dilley bases this claim on the present demand, which is swamping the factories and causing delay in the delivery of many of the models. On some models, he says, delivery cannot be made under thirty days, and he urges that all who contemplate buying the Star place their orders in time to permit the factory to take care of them well in advance of the Spring rush, which has already begun.

Many of the Star agents, he declares, are driving their shipments away from the factories, rather than wait for the cars to be shipped, and in order to give their customers the quickest possible delivery. Easter is causing an immense increase in the number of car orders, and the Star is feeling the prosperity wave in a marked degree.

Arizona Can Supply All of Copper Needed

PHOENIX, Ariz., March 24.—Copper equivalent to one-fourth of Arizona's output of the metal for the year was used in 1922 in the automobile manufacturing industry. The Arizona output was 418,000,000 pounds. The motor-car factories, in copper, brass and bronze parts and fittings, used up about thirty pounds of the metal to the car, or a total weight of 108,280,000 pounds. Many substitutes for copper were found by the manufacturers during the war period, when the metal was high in price and held for war needs. But now, with ample available supply and with relatively low cost there is expectation that copper will be used to a much greater extent in motor car manufacture.

WATER PUMP PACKING

By using the felt of an old hat, washers may be made for packing the stuffing boxes of the water pump. These are made more effective if the felt has been boiled in a mixture of tallow and graphite.

PRIMING FLUID

A special priming mixture, for use in extremely cold weather, is made of one-half ether and one-half gasoline. This solution makes a powerful explosive mixture that will evaporate at any temperature.

REDUCE JERKING AS AUTO STARTS

So-Easy Clutch Attachment Works Improvement, Inventor Claims

An important improvement in the working of an automobile is assured by the So-Easy Clutch attachment, according to its inventor, John L. Whaley, 121 South Jackson street, where he is now manufacturing this attachment at his shop after a series of experiments to perfect the device lasting over several years. Mr. Whaley claims for his invention that it does away with the jerking that is to be noticed so frequently in some cars when the clutch is let in, and the demand for the So-Easy Clutch attachment has already spread all over the western states, to say nothing of the sales that are made locally.

Mr. Whaley has been engaged in buying and selling patents for a number of years, and his wide experience in affairs of this kind, and especially in matters dealing directly with automobile mechanism, has confirmed his opinion that the So-Easy is one of the inventions that are bound to exercise a revolutionary influence on the industry. Mr. Whaley has been a resident of Glendale for the past seven years and has built up one of the leading industries in his own line to be found in the city, and the rapid growth of the demand for his latest invention is bringing an added volume of business every month.

CLUB WOULD TAX USERS OF ROADS

000,000 per year. We believe that the weight fees should differentiate between vehicles equipped with pneumatic tires and those equipped with solid tires, favoring the former on account of the lesser damage they do the highways. We suggest a tax of one-quarter cent per pound on all pneumatic tire equipped vehicles (so-called pleasure cars included) and one-half cent per pound on all solid tire equipped vehicles, basing the tax on the combined weight of the vehicle and its load capacity. Such a tax would yield in excess of $7,000,000, or the balance of the maximum revenue suggested. The weight of the load of passenger vehicles should be figured by multiplying the passenger carrying capacity by one hundred and fifty pounds, and the weight of the load of trucks and all other commercial vehicles should be based upon the manufacturer's rated load capacity.

Seventh—We believe that the weight limits provided for in Senate Bill 115, to-wit: 22,000 lbs. on four-wheeled vehicles and 30,000 lbs. on six-wheeled vehicles, should be adopted. We base this recommendation upon engineering advice made after careful investigation to the effect that the state highways constructed by the former highway commission will not withstand heavier loads."

MOTORIST HEARS CALL OF SPRING

Lure of Open Road Upsets Men's Thoughts, Says Buick Salesman

As spring draws nearer and the days grow warmer the impulse to seek the open road becomes stronger every day, declares Ray L. Galvin, sales manager of Tanner & Hall, Ltd., 237 South Brand boulevard, agents for the Buick automobiles in Glendale.

Every motorist is feeling the cosmic urge to get out and go somewhere, it doesn't matter just where so long as he is traveling, watching the fences fly past while the road sweeps under the springs of the Buick like a dusty ribbon; or when he parks the old bus under some spreading tree and helps the family spread the lunch cloth in the shade and loads up on sandwiches and hard boiled eggs and pickles and the rest of the trimmings. And the fishing season is getting nearer every day, and when a man isn't out on the road right now he is pawing over the book of flies and artificial bait, fitting the rod together to see whether the joints are sliding smoothly into the sockets, and taking it out into the back yard to see if the old split bamboo has lost any of its whip since he laid it away last year.

That's why, says Galvin, he is featuring the Buick Sport Six touring car this week, for it forms the ideal vehicle for these spring days. Lots of room for the family and the lunch basket and the fishing tackle, 'n'everything.

ATTACH SKID CHAINS

Chains can be placed on wheels without the use of a jack by stretching them on the road in the rear of the car, so that they will be in line with the wheels. The car can be moved back a few feet until the ends of the chain are brought to a convenient position for hooking them together.

USES FLIVVER IN HUNT IN MEXICO

Substitutes Car for Horse in Stirring Trip in Desert Wilds

CHICAGO, March 24.—The last clash between the horse and automobile, described here by Stanley R. Graham, a Chicagoan who has just returned from a hunting trip in the wilds of Northern Mexico, has resulted in victory for the auto.

Graham discarded the old faithful horse in his hunt for lions, to substitute the trusty flivver.

His story related how he had chased lions, embracing one with only a hunting coat between him and the lion, and spent nights in Mexican jails, with dope fiends for celimates.

Used Old Auto

"I used an old second-hand Ford to get around in," Graham said, "for water holes are too far apart to go from one to the other in the burning sun with a horse and dogs. My trip would have been impossible without a car.

"One day, when the dogs were faint from lack of water and had just finished a lion, my Mexican companion said he saw a smaller one in the brush three hundred yards away. I went over to the dogs, who got him near the head. I had the Mexican grab his tail, while I threw a heavy duck coat over him. The coat held his claws so I wrapped him up nicely and carried him back to camp.

Hunter Arrested

"They change politics so frequently in Mexico that I had difficulty in keeping out of jail. Because I didn't have a permit to enter the country, with cameras and rifles, they arrested me and threw me into jail with a lot of 'hop heads.' The American customs official across the border got me out.

"Another time, when I attempted to visit the island of Tiburon (where the last cannibals of the Americas are said to exist in a remnant of the Sera Indian tribe.) I was met by a company of soldiers who were on the lookout for Cecil B. DeMille, the motion picture producer, whom they had orders to stop from landing. Unable to convince the soldiers of my identity, I was thrown into jail until the tangle was straightened out."

This was Graham's seventh trip. He bagged six large lions and many mountain sheep, antelope and deer.

SILENT KNIGHTS TO BE INITIATED

New Members Admitted To Organization at First Of April

George T. Smith, 228 South Brand boulevard, local agent for the Willys-Knight and Overland cars, has been notified that the Glendale members of the new order, Silent Knights of the Sleeve Valve, will receive their membership cards in a few days, and they will then be full-blown Knight Riders and members of the only organization of its kind in the world. New members who are eligible for admission to the Silent Knights will be initiated early in April, and all those who have been elected to the organization will be asked to participate in the initiation ceremonies.

The Silent Knights was started on the Pacific coast and is rapidly spreading all over the country, with enthusiastic owners of Willys-Knight cars eagerly seeking admission to its ranks. The watchword of the Silent Knights provides that its members are to extend every courtesy to other automobile owners under all conditions, and already the growth of good fellowship among motorists, as a direct result of the formation of the Silent Knights, is noticeable.

Several carloads of Willys-Knight and Overland cars that are to be delivered here within a few days will enable the local agency to catch up, in some degree, on its orders, which are piling up at a rate hitherto unequalled in its history.

Production at Ford Plant Steadily Grows

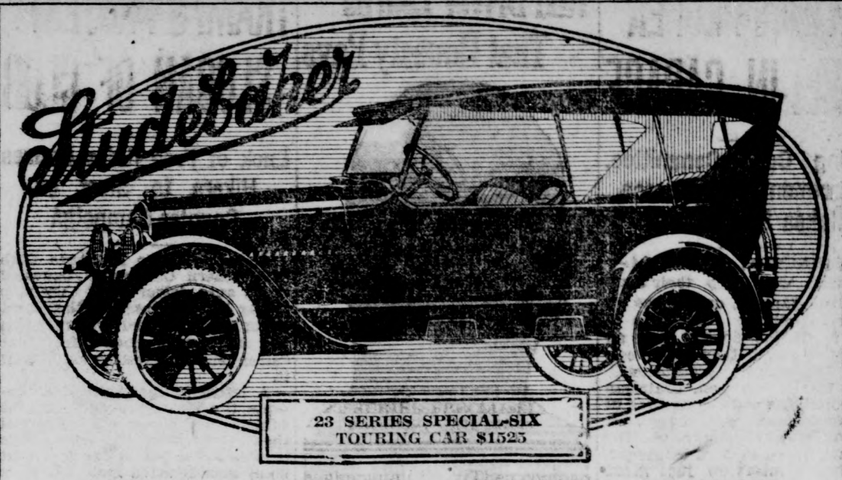
DETROIT, March 24.—Daily production of passenger cars and trucks at the Ford plant this month is rapidly nearing the 6000-car-a-day goal set for April. Herculean efforts are being exerted to bring production up to this point before the end of March. Steadily the demand for Ford cars has exceeded all previous records for this time of year.

In January, 100,118 Ford cars were sold at retail, as against 39,630 for last year. In February sales went to 116,080, as against 48,615 for a year ago, and for March, dealer requirements have reached 201,911, compared with 80,256 for the corresponding month a year ago.

Three eight-hour shifts are being operated six days a week, and the number of men employed at Highland Park is now 60,000, while 33,900 are employed at the River Rouge plants.

BATTERY WISDOM

Use the purest water when adding to the solution in the storage battery to replace losses by evaporation. Because the electrolyte sometimes bubbles over, the solution should never be more than one-half to three-quarters of an inch over the tops of the plates.



You make no mistake when you select the series 23 Studebaker Special-Six Touring Car. You can determine, in advance, why it is so desirable a car to own by doing four simple things.

Come in and inspect it carefully—from radiator to stop-and-tail light. Note its long graceful lines, the beauty of its finish and upholstery, its sturdy construction, roominess and unusual equipment.

Get behind the wheel yourself. See how conveniently all controls are placed. Notice what a relief it is to have a one-piece, rain-proof windshield, giving unobstructed view of the road ahead. See how easily it steers—how faithfully it holds the road.

Test its acceleration, power, flexibility. Drive through traffic at low speed in high gear. See how conveniently it can be parked where space is limited.

Then compare any car within $300 of its price with the Special-Six. Compare the specifications, performance, comfort, appearance and refinements.

And finally talk to some Special-Six owners. Ask them what they think of the car. Ask them frankly about their all-round satisfaction with the Special-Six.

Studebaker's overhead per car is low because of large volume, the virtual elimination of parts-makers' profits and because Studebaker builds three models of six-cylinder cars with only one manufacturing and marketing expense. These savings, which are considerable, are reflected in the price to you.

The name Studebaker stands for quality, durability, comfort and integrity.

February Output of Motors Sets Record

February motor vehicle production was the third largest month on record, according to shipping reports made to the directors' meeting of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in New York recently.

The output of 270,955 cars and trucks is regarded by the industry as indicative of a big year as February is usually a light period. The production figure for the past month is 125 per cent greater than the second month in 1921. The previous high mark for February was 180,000 in 1920.

DAMAGED THREADS

If the threads of a bolt or stud have been damaged and no dies are at hand to clean them, a little work with a triangular file will often make them as good as new.

New York state has 300 regularly organized motor bus companies.

ROOM FOR EVERYBODY

There are enough motor vehicles in the United States to take the entire population of the country for a ride at the same time. At the beginning of 1922 there were 4.2 motor vehicles for each mile of road.

SHOULD FIT WELL

To get the longest mileage out of tires, see that they are the proper tires for the rims, and see that they fit snugly.

TURNING TO RIGHT

COTTON CONSUMPTION

Annual per capita consumption of cotton in the United States is one-sixteenth of a bale.

When a car has had a severe shock the bearings should be immediately inspected.

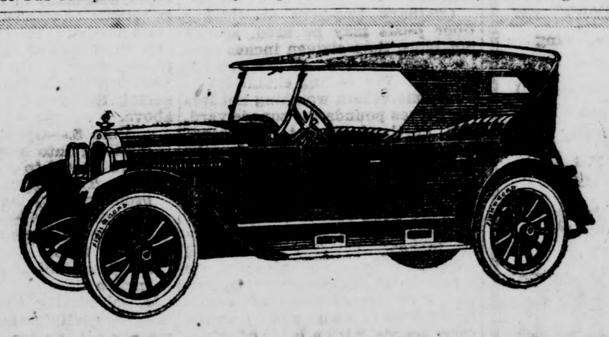
Wall of China Now Used as Motor Road

The wall of China, that great structure which in days past marked the dividing line between civilization and barbarism, is now being used as an automobile highway. Great streams of motor cars travel the top of this huge pile. The wall of Canton, which was practically the same width and height as the great wall of China, has been torn down and the materials have made a wide road twenty-eight miles long, over which motor cars and busses travel daily.

SAFETY FIRST

A motorist at no time should have both hands free of the steering wheel. Small stones, ruts and bumps will quickly disturb the equilibrium, and throw the car in the ditch.

Undue wear on tires is caused by wobbling wheels.



Welcomed Everywhere

Record-breaking sales mark the widespread endorsement of the new Willys-Knight. OUTLINES PROPER BUILT-IN GARAGE

Building Code Committee, Department of Commerce, Makes Suggestions

WASHINGTON, March 24.—"Motorists who keep their cars in built-in garages, or garages attached directly to the side of their dwellinigs do not run an undue fire risk if they follow certain elementary precautions," states Ira H. Woolson, chairman of the building code committee of the Department of Commerce, and consulting engineer of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, in an interview just given out. "We covered the subject of built-in garages for one and two-family houses quite thoroughly in the recommended minimum requirements for small dwelling construction that have just been published by the Department of Commerce," states Mr. Woolson, "and gave directions for constructing them safely, that can be followed by any competent builder.

"If a built-in garage is not properly constructed, it is a menace to life and property. Our investigations showed that if a fire does start in a single or two-car garage, it is not likely to be more severe than would be withstood by the construction classed as affording one-hour fire resistance by the Bureau of Standards of the Commerce Department, the Fire Underwriters' Laboratories, and other authorities. It follows that with an incombustible floor, and the garage separated from the rest of the building by unpierced partitions and ceiling that will meet the one-hour fire test, there is no unreasonable fire hazard.

"Of course, the outside walls must be fire resistant, too, and so must outside windows and the garage doors, in order to prevent flames from breaking out and spreading fire through windows, or to exterior woodwork above. The code does permit, under stringent safeguards, a single swinging, self-closing fire door leading from the garage directly into the house, but we strongly advise that there shall be no opening whatever between the two. It is much safer to enter the garage from the outside."

For the sake of motorists and builders who desire complete directions, Mr. Woolson has prepared below a statement, giving the six rules from the code, together with the directions for carrying them out, as given in the appendix, with a few changes to simplify the wording, which was a little more technical in the original in order to make the rules more practical to enforce. The rules are here arranged by Mr. Woolson "from the ground up," starting with floor construction, walls and partitions, then outside doors and windows, and dealing finally with the permissible case of a door directly between the garage and the dwelling.

Rule 1. — Garage floors shall be of concrete or equally fire resistive and impervious material.

For convenience in cleaning and to prevent dangerous accumulations of water, oil or grease, all parts of the floor should drain naturally.

Rule 2.—Walls and partitions shall be built to meet the requirements of the standard one hour fire test (mentioned above).

Many materials are acceptable under this rule, such as brick, hollow tile, concrete block, or gypsum block four inches thick, or reinforced concrete three inches thick. As a minimum requirement, walls may also be constructed of wooden studs spaced 16 inches center to center, with metal lath attached outside and inside. The outer lath is to be plastered and back-plastered with Portland cement stucco, and the inner lath plastered with three-fourths inch Portland cement or gypsum plaster. For interior partitions separating the garage from the rest of the dwelling three-fourths inch Portland cement or gypsum plaster on metal lath, on both sides of studs spaced 16 inches apart, is satisfactory. The specifications for metal lath and plaster to be used are given fully in the Code Committee's report.

Rule 3. — The combined floor and ceiling construction directly above the garage shall be unpierced, and shall have a fire resistance of one hour. The same rule applies to the roof when the garage is attached to the side of the dwelling.

Ceilings or roofs of reinforced concrete, or some other type of incombustible construction that meets the fire test, are best and most reliable. In the case of true built-in garages, a good, inexpensive overhead construction is as follows:

Ordinary two-inch or thicker floor joists may be used, spaced not more than sixteen inches center to center, and properly bridged. The ceiling should be of heavy metal lath weighing not less than three pounds per square yard, and Portland cement or gypsum plaster not less than three-fourths of an inch thick. The metal lath is to be attached to the joists by sixpenny nails driven nearly home and the head turned over against the lath, and is to be bent down six inches along the walls on all sides and securely attached to them. The flooring above the ceiling is to be double, of seven-eights-inch rough and finished floor boards, with a layer of asbestos or other high grade floor felt between.

Where the garage is attached to the side of a dwelling, an equivalent construction for the roof can easily be devised.

Rule 4.—When a garage is located beneath a dwelling, all outside doors and windows with their frames and sash shall be of standard fireproof construction, and glazed with wired glass.

Only products approved by competent authorities should be used. A large variety of fire doors and windows have been tested and approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories, and are a standard commodity in the building material market. It is important that such devices should be installed in metal frames, and that the same hardware be used as that with which they were equipped when tested. If not, they may fail during the fire. Fire doors are made in both swinging and sliding types, and many of the former are as artistic as wooden doors. Wired glass glazing is required in all outside windows and doors to prevent flames from a fire in the garage from breaking through and endangering the structure or windows above.

Rule 5.—Openings from a dwelling into a garage shall be restricted to a single doorway. This opening shall be protected by a standard swinging, self-closing fire door, with approved fire resistive frame and hardware. No glass shall be permitted in such a door.

A self-closing fire door is one that normally swings shut by a mechanical device. A swinging door is required because it fits closely into its frame, and thereby prevents passage of heat and smoke when attacked by fire. Wired glass is not allowed in this door because it is liable to soften and sag from its fastenings at a temperature of about 1600 degrees Fahrenheit, which is a heat easily produced by burning gasoline or oil. But, as stated above, it is better to have no opening in any of the partitions.

Rule 6.—When a doorway connects directly with a cellar or basement on the same or lower level in which there is any heating device or gas fixture, the door sill shall be raised at least one foot above the garage floor level, or the doorway shall lead into a vestibule which connects with the cellar or basement by a second door.

This is to prevent fumes from gasoline which may leak or be spilled upon the floor from reaching a furnace fire or gas light that might be located in any lower portion of the building. It is well known that gasoline vapors are heavier than air, and will accumulate on a floor like water, and flow to any lower level, and if they come in contact with fire of any kind—even a spark—will ignite and flash back to the starting point, and cause an explosion. Hence the high door sill.

Taxi Driver Learns That Honesty Pays

William J. Brothers of South Boston, a taxi driver, won a kiss from Mrs. Henry Weston of Newark, N. J., and $100 in cash from her husband when he found and returned $4,000 in cash and $10,000 in bonds that had been dropped in his cab.

TRAMPS PROTEST SLOGAN OF CLUB

Lack of Free Rides Causes Hikers to Start on Counter Campaign

Some time ago the Auto Club of Southern California suggested to all auto drivers that they stop giving lifts to strangers they meet along the roads and evidently this has taken such good effect that "strangers" are getting mad about it.

A letter to the Auto club presents the stranger's side of the subject and shows how some of them feel about it. The whole trouble arose out of the fact that many good-hearted motorists have felt sorry for highway hikers and they have given them free rides only to get hit over the head with a sap-stick for their trouble. One man was killed out on the desert reecntly by some strange boys he picked up.

Writes Protest

Here is what a letter, received from "Sacramento Goldie," a hardy Wobblie who admits it, says: (This was written from Douglas, Arizona.)

"At the pesent time I have just completed thirty-five miles of hiking across the wind-swept desert, all on account of your famous slogan 'Don't tolerate with strangers.' I am only a tramp and have been for the last three years. But as you know the biggest part of the Bo's are all lined up and are putting the smear on your slogan. We are starting a campaign telling how it is a gippe game between the stage lines and yourself. I am hitting the old box cars east so your highway slogan can take a slump, but I'm just hoping one of you birds gets it in the desert without water and gets a touch of it. Experience is a dear school but a fool learneth in no other. Hoping to line you up in the Wobblies, I remain,

"Sacramento Goldie, Card No. 47437."

"I'll be back next winter in California."

So it seems that a lot of self-confessed tramps are angry with the Auto club for putting out the slogan "Don't pick up strangers." But it is the fault of the strangers that they do not get picked up. If the highway hikers behaved like gentlemen when they were getting rides they would be helped out more often.

BANKED ON CURVES

Highway engineers in England are constructing roads with an allowance for super-elevation on corner curves wherever desirable. French road engineers long ago adopted the banked curve, and in some parts of the United States they are now in use.

AUTOS ON FARMS

The state of Kansas has 152,000 separate farms. On these there are 114,719 automobiles, 5435 motor trucks, 921,874 tractors and 102 trailers. Only 10,000 farms of the total do not have either motor cars, trucks and tractors.

MOTOR INDUSTRY PAYS BIG TAXES

Government Draws Huge Sum From Imposts Placed on Autos

"One very important contribution that the automobile industry makes to the welfare of our country is unknown to most of my hearers, I believe, and that is the enormous tax it pays toward the support of the government and the payment of our debts," said C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors Co., in a radio address broadcasted from Atlanta, Ga.

"Although from every standpoint of sound and unprejudiced reasoning, the motor car is essential, it, nevertheless, has been singled out to bear a five-percent excise tax placed on all automobiles and parts. In a word, it is taxed as though it were a luxury, whereas it is the world's most advanced and most economical mechanical method for performing the same functions as the wagon, the farm implement, and other essentials that are viewed purely as necessities to the industrial life of the nation, and which are unburdened by an excise tax.

"As I talk I am wondering if you have any conception of what this one tax alone has done toward paying the cost of our part in the recent war.

"I believe I am conservative in stating that this 5-per-cent excise tax on motor cars during the past year has brought to our government the staggering total of from ninety to one hundred million dollars. If this sum were to be contrasted with total amounts received by the government from some states in the Union it would really open your eyes.

"With such figures before you, there can be no reasonable doubt as to the vital part which the motor vehicle plays in the functioning of the social and industrial life of this great nation."

One sinner is apt to rejoice in the downfall of another.

Rules For Park Driving To Be Set By Chief

year and for the car opening motor travel into the park in the spring readily agreed that he should take such action as was deemed advisable.

One of the worst features of stunt runs into the park was that the hazardous conditions prevailing when the stunt was performed were pictured in advertisements two or three weeks later, after such conditions had been removed, thereby deterring many less expert drivers from attempting a trip.

Superintenent Lewis has not announced what he intends to do under the new authority. The two trophies mentioned above are not being offered this year, which eliminates that phase of the question.

May Advance Date

Mr. Lewis has indicated that he has no intention of prohibiting the Los Angeles-Yosemite Economy run, and if any change should be made it probably will be merely an advance in the date beyond the time when the roads are soft and liable to be cut up by a procession of cars. Even this change may not be necessary if the roads open sufficiently early to dry out before the usual week of the run comes around.

Another change in the regulation this year makes the operator of a car carrying passengers for hire within the park, other than the cars operating under government franchise, guilty of violating the section prohibiting the entrance of such cars.

The only other change of interest to motorists emphasizes that Yosemite Valley has one of the finest water supplies in the world, and that campers should not drink water from the Merced River or other open streams in the valley.

LINCOLN CAR IS SHOWN BY SMITH

Prospective Purchasers Are Invited to Inspect Latest Model

A special campaign to place the Lincoln car before the Glendale motorists has been launched by Jesse E. Smith, Ford and Lincoln agent, 125 West Colorado, who now has a seven-passenger Lincoln touring car on the floor of his salesrooms, with W. Daniel, a Lincoln expert, with years of experience in the southern and eastern fields, in charge of this particular branch of the agency's sales department.

The Lincoln is declared to be one of the finest cars on the market today, and its outstanding superiorities are the result of a greater mechanical excellence that has been realized in the past in motor car construction, it is claimed.

The powerful appearance of the Lincoln, combined with the quiet luxury of its appointments, constitute a strong appeal to the motorist, and prospective buyers can secure a complete demonstration of the Lincoln by getting in touch with Mr. Daniel at the Jesse E. Smith agency, when they will be enabled to realize the rugged strength, the ease of handling, the steadiness with which the huge car hugs the road, and all the other points that go to make the Lincoln one of the leaders in the motor world today.

BIG MARKET FOR LOW PRICE CARS

People of Modest Incomes Largest Buyers of Autos, Is Shown

According to statistics recently published, 70 per cent of the passenger cars sold in the United States retail under $1000 and the average car exported sells for about $770; and trucks retail for $1050. From this report it is to be understood that the public with only moderate means is the biggest automobile market and it is to them the dealer must go if he would make his business a success.

In 1922 there were 2,527,000 automobiles sold wholesale at a value equal to $1,558,567,000 in the United States alone. At the beginning of this year there was registered 10,250,000 passenger cars and 1,250,000 commercial cars. During the coming year it has been estimated by experienced manufacturers that it will take 1,800,000 cars to replace worn out machines.

Of the number of cars registered last year 3,000,000 were held by farmers and it is expected that during the next few years the agricultural field will open even more to the automobile industry as cars are becoming a more and more important factor on the farm.

It has been estimated that there are now approximately 38,000 automobile dealers in the United States.

Sixteen Piece Orchestra Will Provide Music; Big Crowd to Be Present

Tonight promises to be a gala night in local Elkdom, when what will probably be the last of the band benefit dances will be given. This affair will be open to the public, and a wonderful evening's entertainment has been planned.

A sixteen piece orchestra composed of some of the members of the Elks' band will furnish the music and a special program of the latest popular and jazz numbers will be furnished. Dancing will begin at 9 o'clock.

The entire proceeds of these dances have been put into a fund to defray the expenses of the Elks' band to the state convention at Eureka next September. The band boys have been working hard and their fellow members of the Glendale antlered herd anticipate that a first prize will be captured.

Tragedy Of The Indians
There Is Higher Court
Let The People Elect
Ballot On Appointees?

By Gil A. Cowan

OFTEN has the writer wondered why the Indians of Utah have not previously gone on the warpath and now that they have there need be no surprise.

These children of the desert have been chased from pillar to post and piloted around from one reservation to another until they are fast disappearing from the face of the earth, dying of broken hearts and white man's ways.

When Columbus discovered America this great continent was the hibernating place for hundreds of tribal nations who probably warred a great deal, but they had a civilization of their own and a cause for being that seems unjust for the Anglo-Saxon race to question.

But powder and bullets and pestilence brought by the white man so weakened the red race and reduced their ranks that it was only a matter of time until they could be quite safely cornered on isolated reservations to slowly starve to death.

In California the tragedy of the Indians is particularly appalling. This great state can well afford to give them all they desire. So can the congress of these United States. Mayor S. C. Evans of Riverside, whose father was a friend of the Mission Indians, so thoroughly convinced the writer of this fact in 1917 that ever since it has been our endeavor to boost the Indians' stock.

It was also the experience of the writer to have lived in Utah long enough to realize the shabby treatment afforded our copper colored brethren and in the name of humanity the United States should stop the annihilation of a noble race. Mayhap some brave will steal a horse, but what is a horse compared with the debt due the aboriginal inhabitants of this land of ours.

Our field corn, our tobacco, yes 101 big things in this life, were handed down to us by the stoic race of Hiawatha. It is to be hoped that this nation will at least be lenient with the survivors.

Victory for the unwritten law was scored in a murder trial at El Centro the other day. It was given much publicity in the newspapers.

On second thought can any person agree that the unwritten law should be recognized, in view of this enlightened age? We think not.

For, while a man or woman may be guilty of indiscretions, it must be remembered that a good woman has recourse to law in case of attack. Otherwise we see no reason for imposing the death penalty.

Rex Samples, the slain man, was only human. Mrs. Breedlove, the woman in the case, was quite too much so, from all evidence. But her husband, who was acquitted, can be considered inhumane if not inhuman.

From our personal knowledge of the case it was nothing more or less than blood lust which previously had expressed itself on the part of Breedlove.

And, if, in the judgment of the jury, which also was human, he is not guilty, there still remains a higher court before which the eternal triangle shall be rent asunder and in a lightning's flash justice shall be wrought for eternity.

The immutable laws of the prophets, the word of God and the teachings of the Lord tell us such is so regardless of individuals who are swayed by passionate appeals in the courts of this or any other country of the earth.

The Sacramento Union is advocating the election of the state railroad commission by a vote of the people. There are two sides to the proposition. From past experience in both appointive and elective officers the public suffers.

In the first place, a man successful in obtaining public office usually is supported by some selfish interest; secondly, an appointee usually gets his job as a payment for some political debt.

It is our humble opinion that all of those seeking such offices as the railroad commission should be recommended, either by the people or the governor, and then draw straws for their jobs.

Luck would likely be with us most of the time, for chances are that an Almighty Providence would intervene, just as it has in many crises faced by this country.

The Union draws the conclusion that all officials exercising judicial power should be elected by the people.

We do not agree with that, but all judges should elect to serve the people, rather than the interests.

In army secret service work it was difficult for the writer to make the enlisted man believe we were working for his protection.

Yet, paraphrasing the Bible, "by their actions ye shall know them." It might be well for the public to vote by referendum on all appointees. That is to say, if, after two years at the general election it would be possible to vote any of the judiciary out of a job, rather than into it.

SHOCKING! CLUB RECEIVES THRILLS

Electrical Exhibition Helps to Entertain Members of Kiwanis Club

The pep of the Glendale Kiwanis Club yesterday was increased by a million volts!

A hair-raising, beard-growing exhibition of electrical stunts was a feature of the weekly luncheon in the banquet room of the Chamber of Commerce. It was put on by L. S. Peterman, J. J. Rarick and G. R. Pettit, representatives of the Southern California Edison Company.

Tickets for the concert to be given by the Orpheus Club Saturday, April 14 in the Tuesday Afternoon Clubhouse, were distributed and confidence was expressed that the house would be sold out before next week's luncheon.

A resolution was passed commending the attitude of the state legislature toward finishing the $16,500,000 worth of roadwork for which contracts have been let already before permitting the highway department to take up any additional work and giving favorable attention to a revision of the state automobile license fees. The subject was brought to the attention of the club by Miller B. Towman, local secretary of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Four Teams to Work

General headquarters for the sale of these tickets was established by the club at 150 South Brand boulevard in the office of Burton McGinnis. The membership was divided into four teams for the sale of these tickets. They will be led by A. L. Baird, Burton McGinnis, W. H. Hooper and Don H. Webb.

W. R. Brown of Pasadena, district governor of Kiwanis for California and Nevada, was a guest of honor. The Pasadena Kiwanis Club was represented by G. C. Earley, L. G. Miller and W. C. Taylor. W. Zimmer and W. P. Millard were present from Los Angeles.

"This club looks awfully good to me," remarked Mr. Brown, "and your town equally so. So much so that I think that I may spend a great deal of my time here in a business way provided that some of the people who live between here and Pasadena don't think something else—I am speaking about the Eagle Rock speed 'cops.'"

"The Growth of the Electrical Industry" was the subject of a short lecture by L. S. Peterman, chairman of the Edison Road Show, which has gone through over 357 performances and has been exhibited to 165,000 people in southern and central California.

Whole Lot of Money

The three hundred and seventy-five million dollars stacked in silver dollars, which the Southern California Edison Company has announced as its budget for the next ten years, according to Mr. Peterman, would reach from Los Angeles along the state highway to a terminus ninety miles north of Sacramento. He said that this sum would be sufficient to pay the president's salary for 5000 years.

People of California use just twice as much electricity per person as persons in the east, according to Mr. Peterman.

The exhibition consisted of chain lightning, forked lightning, and electricity swallowing which would have delighted even old Jupiter Pluvius.

BUILDING READY FOR BIG REVIVAL

Evangelist Jerry Jeter to Give Novel Program at Services

With the completion of the big tabernacle at the corner of Broadway and Cedar street, members of the Broadway Methodist Episcopal Church South, are in readiness for the revival meetings to begin Tuesday night, March 27, at 7:30 o'clock by Evangelist Jerry Jeter.

About 10,000 feet of lumber and 15,000 square feet of sixteen ounce canvas have been used in building the tabernacle, which covers a ground area of 88 by 130 feet. It will seat 3000 people. Several loads of sawdust have been put on the floor. The choir platform will accommodate 300 persons. There are two inquiry rooms provided, and the whole structure is artistically decorated and lighted.

Services are open and free to everyone and will be held every afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and every night at 7:30 o'clock, except Monday.

It has been said of Evangelist Jeter, "He does the work of five people. He preaches, conducts the great choir and sings solos, cartoons, models in clay and is the only evangelist in the world who paints a picture in oil on twelve square feet of canvas before an audience in nine minutes. He believes in the whole Bible and not a Bible with a hole in it."

Mr. Jeter is assisted by his wife, Mrs. Jeter, who is an accomplished trombonist and Bible teacher.

Deauville Scarf Is Popular With Co-Eds

CLEVELAND, March 24.—Elegant variations of the good old cowboy bandana, redubbed the "Deauville scarf," have supplanted all previous fads with college girls here. The wardrobe of every girl who is at all "chic" includes a complete assortment of multi-colored squares of silk to be worn as hat bands, scarfs and sashes, according to the most popular campus mode. They are worn on afternoon and dinner dresses, as well as being an indispensable accessory to all smart sport costumes.

LIGHT, WATER METERS SHOW GROWTH OF CITY

Service Installations Prove That Glendale Population Is Steadily Increasing Each Month; Some Of Recent Figures

THE growth of Glendale is demonstrated by statistics regarding the installation of light and water meters, according to James F. McIntyre, commercial agent of the public service department.

"Requests for installation of meters are coming in very fast this month," he remarked. "More people seem to be coming here all the time and many of them are building homes in the new subdivisions. I look for a big increase in the local population during the present year. Looking ahead from present indications it looks like a very prosperous period for Glendale."

The first half of this month more than seventy-five water meters and ninety-four electric meters were installed by the public service department. Apartment houses, flats, and a number of duplexes have only one water meter, while every tenant has a light meter. This means that the installation of ninety-four electric meters means an influx of about ninety-four families.

If this rate remains uniform, it would mean the influxx of 188 families a month. Counting three people to a family, and not counting the dog or cat, this would total 564 persons a month, 6768 a year or, by adding two cyphers, 676,800 in a century.

By Leaps and Bounds

However, local boosters do not believe that the rate of increase in population will remain uniform. They predict that it will continue to expand according to the square of the hypothenuse of a right triangle. They call attention to the fact that the square of two is four, but that the square of four is sixteen. Therefore, they believe that the growth in local population will be in an ever-enlarging ratio.

The first of March 7724 water meters and 9664 electric light meters were in service. March first, 1922, 6344 water meters and 7542 electric light meters were in use. This shows an increase during the previous twelve months of 1380 water meters and 2122 light meters. This is approximately one-fifth of the total number now in service.

Figures Prove Growth

During the first two months of this year 262 water meters and 368 light meters as compared with the first two months of last year, when 184 water meters and 453 light meters were connected.

January, this year, 139 water meters were fastened into place. This is almost twice as many as January, 1922, when only seventy-eight water meters were installed. During February, 1923, 106 light meters were connected as compared with 123 this February.

REALTORS FIGHT DUPLICATE BILL

Stiff Opposition Develops to Measure Now Before Legislature

The governing committee of the Los Angeles Realty Board has gone on record as unalterably opposed to the bill introduced in the legislature providing that documents filed in the County Recorder's office be prepared in duplicate.

Letters expressing this attitude will be sent by Secretary Tom Ingersol to the entire legislative delegation representing Los Angeles county at Sacramento.

It is contended that many of the documents are written with lead pencil, while others are almost illegible. It is argued that documents when written by hand on printed forms could be easily altered by adding material in the same handwriting, while under the present system it is impossible to tamper with the records.

Dangerous, Is View

It is reported that the title companies and lawyers agree that the passage of the bill would be a serious mistake, while it is asserted that the district attorney's office regards the proposed legislation as dangerous. The trustees of the bar association are said to have passed a resolution asking that this bill be defeated because "it is impracticable."

County Recorder C. L. Logan, who has held the office for sixteen years, reported to the members of the governing committee of the Los Angeles Realty Board that thousands of compliments have been paid his office because of the manner in which the records are kept by writing them in bound books with typewritting machines.

Los Angeles Retains Place in Building

Los Angeles retained third place among the cities of the U. S. in building operations for February, 1923. Detroit was fourth with a total nearly five millions less than that of Los Angeles, while Philadelphia was fifth and Washington, D. C., sixth. San Francisco was ninth in the list and Long Beach was right on the heels of the Bay City. Seattle was fourteenth and Oakland was sixteenth. Glendale broke into the million dollar class for the month.

Although February was a short month building operations as shown by permits issued by 210 cities were 45 per cent heavier than in January and 58 per cent heavier than for February, 1922. The total number of permits for February, 1923, was 40,820 with an estimated valuation of $228,222,590. For the same month last year the number of permits was 34,052 and the estimated $144,477,039.

Thirty-four cities had more than a million dollars' worth of building for February.

Large Amount of Fertile Soil Will Be Reclaimed

EIGHTY square miles of fertile soil are to be reclaimed in the San Fernando valley.

The Los Angeles county engineering department is now working out plans to construct a drainage ditch 200 feet wide parallel to the Southern Pacific railway right of way east of Van Nuys. Waters, which formerly flooded Van Nuys, will be brought to the Tujunga channel and ultimately to the Los Angeles river.

A survey is to be started in a short time, which will include all the land drained by both the Pacoima wash and the Tujunga wash. Van Nuys has been put to considerable expense each year to clear away the debris washed into its streets from the Pacoima wash.

Because of the uncontrolled water thousands of acres of land have been threatened annually by floods from the Big Tujunga. Crops have been ruined and vast areas of land inundated under four feet of water.

The Tujunga channel is to be protected by rock taken from the quarries near San Fernando. The cost of the improvement will be approximately $100,000.

The plans have been under consideration for a long time, and, it is predicted, will be successfully carried through.

HOME OWNER IS BETTER CITIZEN

Money Paid for Rent Could Be Used to Purchase House and Lot

Glendale enjoys the distinction of being a city of homes. Yet there are some who will argue that it is cheaper to rent a house than to own one.

If this were true the landlords would all go out of business, for they most assuredly are not in the house-renting game for their health.

In the long run you will find that the man who puys a lot and builds has saved up a tidy sum by investing in a home while the man who keeps on renting has very seldom saved an equal amount.

Many a man has gone into debt that he might purchase a home and has won out because he had an incentive for saving, while otherwise he would have spent his entire income without anything to show for the money.

Better Citizens

Also, as a rule, the man who owns his home is a more representative citizen and enjoys a better financial credit among tradesmen.

It follows, as a matter of course, that he is interested in his home city and its growth and in the conduct of its public officials.

The advantages of owning one's home in comparison to paying rent are too numerous to mention.

Restrictions on Hotel Height Are Removed

Restrictions on the height of fireproof hotel buildings are removed by Senator Dwight Hart's bill signed March 20 by Governor Richardson. This bill repeals the first paragraph of the state law regulating construction of hotels which limited the height of fireproof buildings to 150 ft. or "one and a half times the width of the widest street to which the lot on which it is situated abuts." There was no opposition to the bill.

Just an evidence of Glendale's growth, the first two months of this year 262 water meters and 368 light meters were installed.

Attractive Subdivisions in This City and Its Vicinity

THE photographer for The Glendale Evening News this week secured some pictures of a few of Glendale's subdivisions. Visualize these properties then know that one concern sold $225,000 in lots last Sunday. Lot sales play a big part in Glendale's development. These pictures give a hint of "things doing" amid some of the subdivisions; they furnish a few reasons why you should invest in realty in Glendale or close to it.

Realty Men in Conference on Caring for Federal Land Holdings

The biggest owner of real estate in the world, the United States government, is holding a series of conferences at Washington with the National Association of Real Estate Boards, in order to determine the best and most economical methods of handling federal properties. In these conferences the association is being represented by W. E. Shannon, chairman of the Federal Real Estate Board Committee. Mr. Shannon is being assisted by R. T. Cragin, Cleveland; W. H. Ball, Philadelphia; Charles G. Edwards, New York City, and H. P. Haas, Pittsburgh.

In commenting on the conferences already held with the federal Real Estate Board, Mr. Shannon says:

CONSUMPTION OF LUMBER IS HIGH

California Absorbs Large Percentage of Timber From Northwest

California consumed practically 25 per cent of all the lumber that was cut in the two Northwestern states in 1922, according to the California Lumber Merchant.

Southern California alone took 1,250,000,000 feet and the northern part of the state approximately 750,000,000 feet—an aggregate in round numbers, of 2,000,000,000 feet.

The total production in Oregon and Washington did not exceed 8,000,000,000 feet, if, indeed, it was that much.

Take the pine production of Eastern and Southern Oregon and eastern Washington out of the total cut of the two northern states and you reduce the total by a substantial amount.

SEVEN BASIC REASONS FOR PROSPERITY HERE

Eugene S. Sanders, New Secretary Of Local Chamber of Commerce, Tells Some Of Causes Why Glendale Grows

WHAT is causing Glendale realty values to mount steadily? What is bringing new thousands of home-seekers to this city annually? What is giving this city schools, factories, public buildings, clubhouses, office structures almost by the dozen, duplexes and apartment houses by the score, and literally hundreds of bungalows a year?

What is making the building total hit the million dollar mark nearly every month?

In short, just what is at the basis of Glendale's amazing and continued prosperity?

The new secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Eugene S. Sanders, vividly and penetratingly analyzes the situation and answers the questions that are in everyone's mind.

"Before going into some of the many reasons for Glendale's coming place in the forefront of American cities," states Secretary Sanders, "let it be clearly understood that this situation of gratifying prosperity in which we find ourselves is not transitory but permanent. It depends on no temporary bonanza, such as oil or gold, but is built upon a foundation as solid as that upon which our mountains rear.

Climate Is First

"Now for the reasons—just read them over:

"First of all, of course, there is our climate. And while it is true that the same thing applies to most of southern California, yet it is true that Glendale's climate is just a little more equable than that to be found elsewhere, due to our particularly fortunate location with respect to the ocean, the valley and the hills, being at the right distance from each. This fact is well known to physicians, and our splendid sanitariums and hospitals bear it out.

"The second reason I would give for our prosperity is our proximity to Los Angeles. We are just seven miles distant, near enough to commute and to derive the full benefits that come of being adjacent to a great metropolis, yet far enough away to reap all the pleasures of peaceful home life amid the beauties of nature.

Altitude Big Aid

"Third, I would attribute a great measure of our progress to our altitude. We are just 600 feet above sea level, high enough to escape the enervation of the lowlands, yet low enough to be saved the dizzying effect that comes at higher levels. Strangely enough, perhaps, if you take a path 600 feet above sea level and carry it clear across the country you will take in most of the cities that amount to anything, among them Chicago, that great midpoint of the nation.

"Fourth, we have in Glendale and the surrounding country a wonderfully rich and productive soil, a soil that bears out the dream of those thousands of people who come here from the east, of growing flowers and fruit the year around. This unfortunately cannot be said of all of southern California.

"Fifth, we have the water. Our water has been analyzed by the government and reported 99.9 per cent pure. In fact, our water is so pure that two well known bottling works are located here.

Unrivaled Scenery

"Sixth, we have the scenery. Not in Italy or in Switzerland can any more magnificent vistas be found, of valleys, mountains, lakes, in a thousand gorgeous combinations. You can see all there is to see in and about New York or Chicago in two days—but not in two lifetimes can you delve into all of the marvelous beauty spots of which Glendale is the heart and soul.

"And, seventh, we have the fertile, productive back country. In the San Fernando is a valley as rich as the Nile, where foodstuffs are raised so greatly in excess of our needs that they are shipped throughout the country—citrus, fruits, peaches, plums, apricots, vegetables of nearly all kinds, poultry, livestock and numerous other products.

"Those are seven of the reasons for Glendale's solidly built prosperity. There are others but those seven are basic."

STATE HIGHWAYS COST $49,691,895

Income for All California Roads in 1921 Amounted To $14.50 Per Capita

California now has 44,775 miles of improved road, not including that added during last season, according to the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, which has made a complete census in the state. The improved road mileage at the beginning of 1922 was as follows:

Graded and drained	30,499
Sand-clay	240
Gravel, chert and shale	7,087
Water-bound macadam	533
Surface treated macadam	1,355
Bituminous macadam	701
Sheet asphalt	585
Bituminous concrete	493
Cement concrete	2,613
Miscellaneous	669

The total road mileage of the state is 75,889 miles, as compared with 61,039 miles in 1914, and during the seven-year period from 1914 the surfaced and paved roads have increased from 10,280 to 14,275 miles.

The total income for highways in 1921 amounted to $49,691,895 or $319 for each square mile of area, $655 for each mile of road, or $14.50 per capita.

PASSION PLAY IS SPEAKER'S TOPIC

Noted Traveler to Lecture at Tuesday Afternoon Club Meeting

In celebration of Holy Week, the Tuesday Afternoon club is to enjoy a pre-Easter meeting Tuesday afternoon, when Madame Genevra Johnstone-Bishop will give an illustrated lecture on "The Passion Play of Oberammergau," and Easter music will be given by Ernest Morrison, tenor; Edna Marxmiller, contralto, and Gladys White, soprano.

During Madame Johnstone-Bishop's lecture the club's new projection room will be used for the first time in showing the illustrative slides.

Madame Johnstone-Bishop witnessed the Passion Play in 1900 and 1910, when she was a guest in the home of Anton Lang, who played the part of Christ.

Among the musical numbers to be given will be "Ave Maria," "He Shall Feed His Flock," "Come Unto Him" and "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth."

Before the program there will be the regular hour of community singing, led by Hugo Kirchhofer, and a club meeting.

Mrs. Colin Cable will be in charge of the sale of cooked food before and after the meeting.

Commerce Dept. Aids Probe of Sugar Prices

WASHINGTON, March 24.—All records of the commerce department bearing upon recent increases in sugar prices here today were placed at the disposal of the department of justice, which is conducting an investigation to determine if there has been "arbitrary interference" with prices, and if an "artificial shortage" has been created.

GIRL HOLDS MOB OFF IN DRY RAID

Female Agent Shoots Way to Safety as Crowds Launch Attack

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—Vivian Mead, woman prohibition agent, and Dry Enforcement Officer Earl Miller, were held at the city prison today, following a sensational scene in a Broadway cafe, in which Miss Mead drew a pistol and shot a way to safety for herself and Miller when they were attacked by a mob following a raid.

According to police, five shots were fired. It is not believed anyone in the crowd was wounded. They fell back, however, permitting Miss Mead and her companion to escape in their automobile. Police pursued and arrested them on a series of charges. The dry officers claim police interference with the raid. Police were investigating whether Miss Mead was regularly deputized as a prohibition agent.

Funny Man Fails to Enjoy Joke on Self

ELYRIA, Ohio, March 24.—When the official razzer gets the razz it's not so funny, thinks Jim Armitage, who conducts the joke column in a local paper.

At an Exchange club banquet Armitage accepted a young pig as a part of a joke, took the young porker home and put it in the cellar. "Neighbors" complained and Armitage was haled into court charged with violating the city ordinance.

Armitage's plight is affording the community its biggest laugh in many moons.

EASTER CANDY TO MANY CHILDREN

Record Crowd of Youngsters Calls During Day at Roberts & Echols

The pre-Easter treat given to Glendale children each year by the Roberts & Echols drug store at 102 East Broadway, took place today, when every boy and girl calling at the store between the hours of 9 and 3 o'clock received a bag of Easter candy.

This has been an annual custom of the store for six years, and a larger crowd of youngsters received candy this year than ever before. Boys and girls lined two blocks from the store this morning and by noon more than 1700 bags of candy had been presented and by 3 o'clock this afternoon more than 3000 children will have visited the store.

Woman of 91 Awarded Prize at Costume Ball

CHICAGO, March 24.—Although 91 years old and great-grandmother of three, Mrs. Ernestine Apfel, of Chicago, recently made the youngsters take a back seat, while she captured a prize at a costume ball held here.

Mrs. Apfel, attired in a ragamuffin bootblack's outfit, took first prize. And other visitors at the ball declared Mrs. Aptel was entitled to the first prize for "pep." She appeared at the dance at 8:15 and remained until midnight, dancing all but one dance.

Mrs. Apfel, despite her 91 years, takes an active interest in the affairs of her neighborhood. Her favorite pastimes are movies and telling other old folk how to keep young.

Would Have Autoists Pass Driving Tests

DETROIT, March 24.—Revision of automobile license regulations so that every applicant will be forced to give a demonstration of ability to handle a car properly in congested traffic will be asked of the state legislature by Dr. James W. Inches, Detroit police commissioner.

"Such modification of the automobile laws would be a proper supplement for Judge Charles L. Bartlett's campaign of severity against offenders," Dr. Inches says. "It would prevent many incompetent drivers from getting into trouble at all.

At present the issuance of licenses is little more than a formality."

A record of the identity of every driver would be required under the police commissioner's plan.

ARMY OFFICER'S WIFE IS MISSING

Disappears While She Is Taking Walk in Park in San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—Search was being made today for Mrs. Edward A. Braden, 35, wife of Colonel Braden, a retired army officer, missing since 3 p. m. Wednesday when she went for a walk in Golden Gate park. Friends fear foul play or a sudden lapse of memory.

The disappearance has been reported to the police authorities and so far search has failed to reveal a clew to the missing woman's whereabouts.

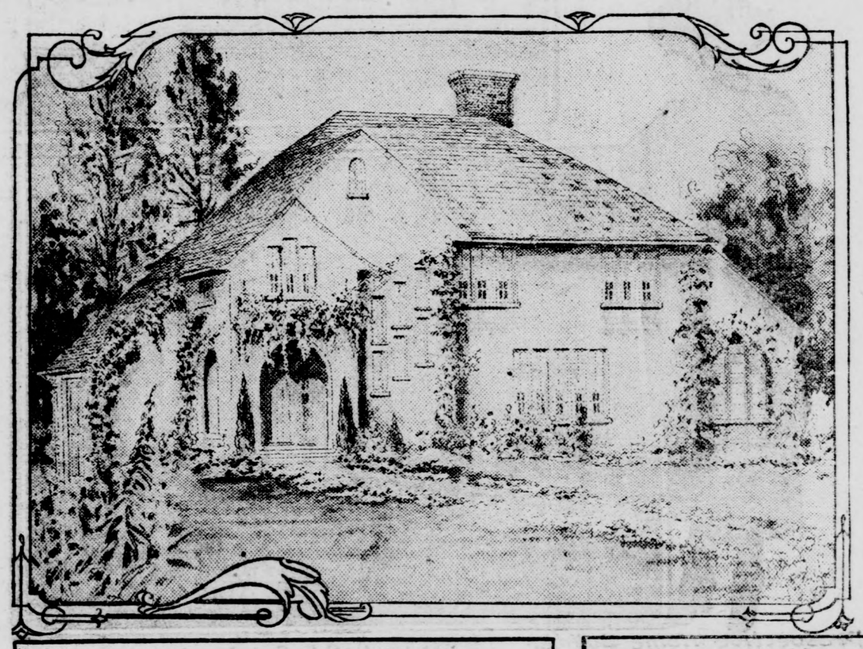
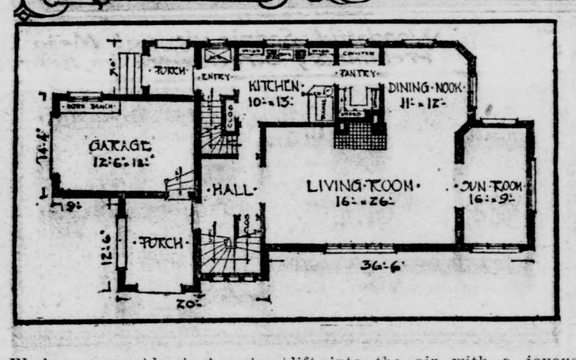
House Plans for Home Planners

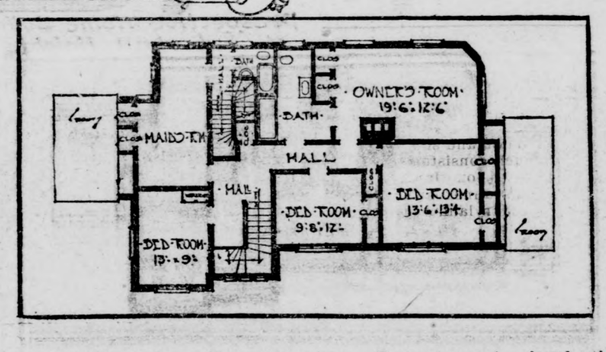
House with Garage Attached Is Always a Profitable Investment

Designed For a Large Corner Lot, This House Has An Imposing Appearance and a Comfortable Interior Plan.



Note the convenient entrance to garage from the porch, the cheerfulness of the room arrangement and the economy of design.





We have a new idea in America. A cottage is not merely a pretty, tiny little house with roses outside and nothing inside but inconvenience. The American cottage is well designed. It is practical, economical and convenient. It must have a comfortable living room with an open fireplace, bedrooms always of course, bath and maid's room when a maid can be afforded or found. We want real homes, large or small, and we want them for everybody.

We are short about five million homes in America and every man has his own ideal of a home. Home building can no longer be an adventure in real estate. It is the building up of something interesting—a good investment, to be sure, and a delightful place to live in as a result.

The house shown in the illustration that accompanies this article was designed to be built on a large corner lot. It is essentially a house that requires the ornamentation of flowers and the association of trees, for it is severely simple and relies on Nature's cooperation in the matter of finish. The silhouette is especially fine, for the house rests upon the earth with a firm base and yet seems to lift into the air with a joyous swing. It is symmetrical, with plenty of windows and a pleasing roof line, and yet not formal enough to be repellent.

Many people like to have a garage as a part of the house proper. To comply with fire laws, such a house would have to be built of hollow tile and stucco or brick. Hollow tile and stucco are especially good for this type of construction. The house could be built on a corner lot and entrance to the garage made directly from the side; or a private roadway could run from the street front, with enough swing in front of the garage to admit turning the car.

One can enter the garage from the porch, and as this passageway is under cover it would be of special benefit to the owner in inclement weather.

From the hall a full view of the living room and dining room is had at a glance, and a large arch gives entrance to the sun room. This gives light from three directions, for there is an abundance of windows through which the sun will shine cheerily. The effect of brightness and cheer is further enhanced by the fireplace. There is room against the side walls for piano or book shelves; in fact, the room lends itself easily to picturesque arrangement of furniture.

A study of the floor plans shows that the workrooms have been segregated with a view to making the housework easy, as well as creating a sense of separation between the working and living quarters of the house. A doorway at the end of the large hall opens into the smaller kitchen hall. The kitchen is roomy. One entire end is given over to a sink and working shelves all on one level, over which are arranged cabinets for dishes and food. There is a separate closet for cooking utensils and a place for the icebox in the entry, close to the service porch. A roomy pantry, equipped with shelves from floor to ceiling, is between the kitchen and the dining nook. Screens can be arranged to separate the dining nook from the dining room if desired.

Upstairs, in addition to a large owner's room, there are three bedrooms and a large bathroom for the members of the family, and a maid's room with private bath. The arrangement of the rooms upstairs shows the greatest practical use of given space, the entire plot being cut up as little as possible with wall spaces. This makes a simple layout and a convenient one. Every room is abundantly supplied with closets and there are also two closets in the hall for linen, brooms or extra bedding.

The maid's room could be used as a sewing room or a child's room, in which case the extra bath could be done away with, and thus the cost of the house reduced. However, if future sales are to be considered it would not be a bad investment to install this second bath, even if it were not to be used, as a house with two or more baths is coming to be more and more desired.

The planting around this house should be carefully thought out. To make the most of the whole design it will need to be a bit formal, as the character of the house suggests.

The house is 56½ feet wide and 43 feet deep, and will need a lot of 75 feet frontage, at least. A smaller lot would dwarf the design entirely and put its splendid dignity at an unfair advantage. A wooded lot of large proportions is the ideal setting.

For information as to procuring of the building plans of this design No. 46, send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to the House Plan Editor, in care of this paper.

GLENOAKS WINS WITH ITS BEAUTY

Residential District In Midst Of Fruit Trees and Oaks Attracts

A residential park of rare beauty and appeal is promised by the Frank Meline Company to homeseekers buying lots in the Glenoaks tract, for which they are selling agents.

This picturesque site, comprising over 700 acres of level, orchard-filled valleys and rolling, oak-crowned hills, lies to the east of Glendale, in the heart of a natural amphitheatre commanding superb vistas in every direction.

Here, in this peaceful paradise so near to this city, Los Angeles, Pasadena and Eagle Rock, large, beautiful homesites 50 by from 175 to 200 feet are being offered at $750, $800, $850 and upwards on liberal terms, states Tract Manager Hascal S. Hall.

Wide Boulevard

"Everything possible will be done by the Frank Meline Company to make Glenoaks one of the finest residential districts in Southern California," Manager Hall pledges. "Our engineers have been at work for months making surveys for the wide boulevard that will go straight through the property to Pasadena, and two acres of the choicest ground in the development has been donated as a permanent gift to the home-builders there, as a community center.

"Tennis courts and other recreational facilities will be put on those two acres at our own expense, including a fine community house which is a personal gift from Frank Meline.

"Miles of bridle paths, moreover, will wind in among the wooded hills, connecting with the Flintridge paths and offering unsurpassed equestrian facilities.

Fine Fruit Trees

"What we are doing at Glenoaks is not just merely subdividing property. We are building an entire residential district, as we have done at Beverly Hills and elsewhere. When the Frank Meline Company takes up a project, it must first be satisfied of its superiority—then it goes the limit to develop and bring out every latent possibility.

"Glenoaks must be seen to be fully realized. You should come and see the acres of fruit trees bestowing their fragrance over the entire valley and showering their pink, carmine and white petals earthward like a benediction.

"Come out today and let us show you how beautiful is Glenoaks, and how real are its values" urges Manager Hall.

The Glenoaks tract may be reached by driving east on Broadway to Verdugo road and turning north three blocks to a large sign that will direct the way. Many other signs make it impossible to go astray and a five minute drive from almost any part of Glendale will reach the tract.

GETS 5 MINUTES TO DESCRIBE L. A.

Speakers at Realty Meeting Must Talk Quick in National Contest

Can a speaker tell of the attractions of Southern California in five minutes?

If so, how many words will he utter?

These and other similar questions are worrying Harvey M. Porter, treasurer of the Los Angeles Realty Board, who has been selected to represent his organization in a national speaking contest.

The contest will be held in connection with the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, scheduled for June at Cleveland, Ohio.

Porter, in addition to being treasurer of the local board, is head of the organization's educational committee.

In former years when speaking contests were held it has been the custom for each speaker to soar into oratorical fights on the subject of his own locality. It is understood the same rule will be observed for the coming convention.

According to Edwin G. Hart, president of the Los Angeles board a number of real estate men have signified their intention to attend the national meeting.

FIX UP PROGRAM OF REALTY MEET

National Convention Will Hear Addresses on Many Topics

CHICAGO, March 24.—Plans for the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at Cleveland on June 27th to 30th are maturing rapidly and the program is taking form. At a conference held in Cleveland on March 3rd, between the program committee of the National Association consisting of President L. F. Eppich, Executive Secretary H. U. Nelson and President A. B. Smythe of the Cleveland Board, and the convention committee of the Cleveland Board, of which E. C. McKay is chairman, the general features of this great gathering were agreed upon and the subjects for discussion were selected.

The program will be different from any other national convention in that forenoon sessions will be devoted to the discussion of great general problems which affect the real estate business as a whole. The afternoon sessions will be devoted entirely to meetings of the divisions and will be highly intensive in their character.

Program Is Varied

Rapid progress is being made by the divisions in the preparation of their programs. The Mortgage and Finance division, of which H. S. Cody of Chicago, is chairman, the industrial division, of which B. L. Lambuth of Seattle is chairman, and the property management division, of which J. W. Balanger of Chicago is chairman, have completed tentative outlines of their programs and are now engaged in securing their speakers. The home builders' and subdividers' division under the leadership of I. Shuler of Omaha, the farm lands division with B. F. Faast of Eau Claire as chairman, and the brokers' division with H. Whitcomb of Boston as chairman, will also soon have their programs ready. The program of the Realtor-Secretaries' division is being planned by W. S. Bigelow, secretary of the Cleveland board.

Every realtor will find in the Cleveland convention new, up-to-date and precise information about the special phases of the real estate business in which he is interested. The gathering, it is said, will be a post-graduate course in real estate.

Fire Chiefs Outline Legislative Program

SACRAMENTO, March 24.—California fire chiefs in annual convention here notified their respective representatives in the legislature that they favor passage of the fire-cracker bill, the state fire marshall bill and the fire boat bill.

The fire chiefs also went on record as favoring legislation tending to force automobilists and pedestrians to clear a road on which fire apparatus is being rushed to a fire.

Chief Thomas R. Murphy of San Francisco was re-elected president of the state organization; George Wallace of Modesto was named vice president; Assistant Chief Ralph Williams of Modesto was selected secretary, and J. W. Stevens of San Francisco, treasurer.

Highway Board Will Test Road Ruling

SACRAMENTO, March 24.—The state highway commission, in a statement released through its secretary, W. F. Mixon, announces that it will be forced to abandon its policy of completing the main trunk lines with interstate connections, if it is unable to make "cash settlements" at the termination of road contracts entered into by the former commission.

Referring to the action of Attorney General Webb in declaring illegal the use of highway funds in "buying off" contractors, the highway board indicates that it will institute a test suit in the courts to determine the validity of Webb's ruling.

visit to Flintridge these days would persuade the most skeptical that spring has come. The early flowers are blooming in abundance on the Flintridge hillsides, the oaks and sycamores have taken on a brighter green, the canter of hoofs is heard along the winding Flintridge bridle paths, and a persistent chorus of "Fore" is heard along the length and breadth of the Flintridge fairways. Flintridge horsemen opened their season yesterday with an exciting paper chase in which about thirty mounts participated.

The active building program at Flintridge continues unabated. The new homes of L. Raymond Freer in Flintridge Park and W. H. Munn on Commonwealth avenue, have just been completed. Ground will be broken during the coming week for the new homes to be erected by Louis Cass, Roy Baylie and Harry G. Johnasing of Los Angeles.

ENLARGE AWNING COMPANY'S PLANT

Gilliam's Payroll Jumps to $200 From $35 Weekly In Two Months

W. T. Gilliam, manufacturer of awnings, tents and camp equipment, whose factory at 210 East Broadway, the home of the Lewis C. Davis linoleum and shade works has shown such consistent growth since it opened on January 16, states that his annex at the rear of 110 South Maryland avenue will be ready for occupancy by the first of next week.

"We will then move our factory to that location," says Mr. Gilliam, "retaining our present location on East Broadway as a show-room, where our fine line of tents and awnings will be on display.

"We are equipping the new factory site with the most up-to-date machinery available. Two powerful tent-making machines, just received from Kansas City, are now being installed, together with a complete bench of pipe-fitting machines and tools, that will enable us to turn out high quality work at short notice."

A feature of the remodeled show room at 210 East Broadway will me a model camping tent rigged up, with camp-fire, leaves and wooded efects.

Mr. Gilliam reports that his weekly pay-roll has increased from $35 to over $200 and will soon hit the half-thousand mark.

He attributes his success in Glendale to the fact that for ten years he was associated with the Carnie-Goudie Company, Kansas City, a large firm dealing in a similar line of business, and has had a broad experience in this work.

Mr. Gilliam's recent orders show the Spanish type of awning to be a big favorite with Glendale homeowners.

Osborne Seeks Father's Seat in U. S. Congress

SACRAMENTO, March 24.—Henry Z. Osborne, Jr., of Los Angeles, filed petitions with Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan which will permit him to be a candidate for the congressional post left vacant by the death of his father, the late Congressman Osborne of the Tenth district.

No other candidates have filed for the election today. The election is scheduled for May 1.

Former Governor William D. Stephens has been prominently mentioned as a possible candidate for the congressional seat, but has thus far given no indication as to his intentions.

SHOWS PROSPERITY

The continued opening of new subdivisions and the sudden sale of many lots therein indicates Glendale's steady growth, experts point out. And building permits at the city hall show that buyers of lots almost immediately start work on homes.

SOUND PROOF

With new building material, partitions an inch and a half thick are as strong and as soundproof as the ordinary one of six inches.

BEAUTY IS VITAL FACTOR IN HOME

Building of Dwelling Calls For Embodiment of Conveniences

What kind of a house are you going to be satisfied with when you build?

Did you ever have a suit that you became so tired of that it got on your nerves—one that you couldn't wear with comfort any longer?

Did you know that the same thing frequently happens with houses—that if they are not well planned sometimes become almost unbearable to their occupants?

One reason that architecture exists, as distinguished from mere building, is to prevent such things from happening—it exists in order that you and I may have dwellings that give us constant joy, rather than as often depress our spirits, in order to provide us with homes that we become attached to and never want to leave.

Do you know that some people's spirits are like barometers—something's got to keep them raised or they'll go down?

Are yours that way?

Home Is Stimulus

Music will answer for a stimulus with some, with others it is books, but with the majority their home surroundings have a lot to do with it.

Did you ever stop to consider that every vocation in life has a purpose, that otherwise it would go out of use?

Perhaps we all sometimes imagine that certain vocations are superfluous for us, that by cleverness we can dispense with patronizing them.

Does that of architecture seem like one such to you?

One way to live is in an autocamp. Have you ever tried it?

For a steady diet I imagine it is not very satisfactory.

Next to that is a mere building. That doesn't answer very well, either.

It affords a place to walk around in, to sleep and eat in, but not one to be very happy in.

It lacks one vital necessity put in this world for happiness, namely, art. Art in combination with building spells architecture.

You can't secure architecture for your home by sticking on a frill here or a doodad there.

One sees such attempts occasionally and they are pathetic.

Architecture is a quality that must be interwoven into the very structure of a building, into its plan and design.

This is no task for an amateur. To do it well requires not only native talent, but years of training and application.

The way it can best be done varies with every problem. An almost infinitude of architectural combinations form the mental stock in trade of the man who is thus equipped.

Must Be Practical

He has traveled widely or studied extensively in order to acquire the necessary vocabulary. His mind has become a kaleidoscope of architectural ideas, so that at each new turn of the domestic conditions of a home builder he knows what combination will best unlock the secrets of conveniences and beauty to fit the case.

Practical he must be. Beauty must walk hand in hand with convenience. They must dovetail together, each giving opportunity for or expression to the other.

To accomplish this requires thought and also necessitates much handiwork.

Draftsmen must be employed, trained to portray graphically and with accuracy of figures and detail the accumulated results of such thought so that later they will blossom forth in enduring materials as the realization of the owner's wants and dreams.

So is it a mere building that you will be satisfied with, or will you demand one that has had your ideas woven into its fabric by an artist who read your wishes aright and interpreted them with sureness of touch in terms of convenience and beauty?

At birth the baby giraffe measures six feet from its hoofs to the top of its head.

GLENDALE IS UPON EDGE OF EDEN, WRITES POET

Joaquin Miller, Fifteen Years Ago, Tells of City's Attractions; His Article Is Once More Produced In Full

FIFTEEN years ago Joaquin Miller, the "poet of the Sierras," now dead, visited Glendale and wrote a descriptive article for a Los Angeles newspaper in which he declared that Glendale is at Eden's edge and is the home of health and the vale of beauty. That was fifteen years ago. A whole lot has happened to Glendale since then. Yet what the poet wrote fifteen years ago is just as true today. Here's his article:

By JOAQUIN MILLER
"Poet of the Sierras"

I would not venture to call the vast, rich region round about Los Angeles paradise, whatever enthusiasts of the east might venture to say. But to me it is surely on the edge of Eden. For here I find not only "every tree that is pleasant to the sight," in the words of Holy Writ, but also "all that is good for food."

For instance, while here are fine orange groves, lemon and olive groves, and all that sort of fine product, the special fruit that is grown for food in Glendale is the strawberry — great, broad, sandy and warm fields of strawberries.

There are some few Mexican women at work planting and weeding strawberries. Where are the others who want work?

Ancient little old Tropico went to sleep in her strawberry bed a quarter of a century ago and only wakened up two or three years back when she heard the rattle and clang of the electric cars. And yet, all the time for years and years, the Southern Pacific thundered past in full view.

Advocates Railroad

Were I to venture to advise anybody how to build a town and fill it full of happy people, I should say "Run a railroad, a fine, live, electric railroad, right through the heart of your town before you drive a peg or sell a lot."

This was the old Roman way. And it was the one and only right way. When Rome wanted to conquer a country, a very general desire of hers, she first built a road to the heart of the country she wanted to settle and civilize. By the time she got the road done, the rest had to follow.

The seven-mile ride out from the city to this healthful, happy little Tropico in her warm rich strawberry beds is the most restful ride you can conceive. You are sorry when it is done.

And two miles farther still, this road, straight as a string and as solid as a London subway, keeps on until it touches the base of the Verdugo steeps, cloud-topped and 3000 feet in the air.

Along Main Street

The main street on and to and through Glendale, set with date palms most of the way, is miles and miles in length, some of it strawberry fields, some of it olive trees, some of it orange trees, some of it such cottages as you may see at Newport, Saratoga, and so on.

But it all is as pretty as you can conceive. In truth, it would take a Victor Hugo or a Bret Harte to call up in his mind a scene like this, only seven miles out of Los Angeles—without first having seen at least some fractional part of this flowered land.

The next best thing after the restful road, and that which comes nearest in winning your confidence is the first station at which you alight in Glendale. I never took notice of a depot before after a good look at wondrous Charing Cross, London.

But this at Glendale is a castle and fairy land combined. I don't know who conceived this, fashioned it or paid for it. I don't care. But I took off my hat to the spirit to the soul that made it today.

For I am an idolator!

I am an idol worshiper, a worshipper of beauty, beauty that must forever be idolizezd and adored as Keats' adored beauty as he lay dying in Rome.

And this station, this stepping off place out in the strawberry beds, the olive groves and the orange groves, is seven miles out of the city. Yet the finest thing of the sort—not the fattest, mind you—is seven miles out from the city—seven miles!

Now, why should not every railroad station be beautiful, be clean, watered, set with flowers, bowered with growing trees, girt with grasses?

It is only a short walk up the palm-set street to one other bit of architectural beauty. This is the Glendale Club House, a modest bit of old mission remembrance, with genuine old mission tiles above the archway.

For my own part, personally, I abhor clubs. I prefer the hospitality of a pine or cedar tree in the forest. But since men and women of cities must have club rooms, I am grateful for the idea uttered here in stone and mortar.

In truth, the whole thing, from the green and shapely mound on which the semi-mission little palace stands, up to the topmost round, is so restful and so rich in contour and comeliness that I had to demand the name of the man who designed it.

I could not get it fully. I fancy the man, like most men who do things, did not want to be in the newspapers and I did not press the question.

Lots of Health

But I was promptly and freely informed that the work was all done by men who lived there in the little city, real genuine men, who took a personal pride in their work.

Ye gods, could we but have such men in a city—in all cities. How happy they would be. How much happier we of all the world would be.

Before we had been long in and about the town, I told my companion that this Glendale, here in the heart of the San Fernando valley, was perhaps the most healthful place in all the state of California. For this warm, soft sand, nearly thirty miles from the sea, was surely an absorbent of all ills flesh is heir to.

And lo! In a little time we came upon a great home of health, in a flower garden so broad and rich, and daisies so tall and wondrous, that I had to beg a photographer of them at his house, and went in person to the door to beg something of this warm soil of sand as expressed in these flowers this "roaring month of March."

Plenty of Water

"Water in Glendale?

"Why, we still have water to burn in Glendale. The water here is all our own. We have a great arroyo up yonder, only two or three miles in the Verdugo mountains." You can see the mouth of the canyon from the doorstep of the club. The water is soft and sweet and pure as possible. Great oak and sycamore trees grow there, and the reservoirs are "a joy forever."

"What do you do out here?"

"We don't do anything much out here. We go to town, most of us, and do our do in Los Angeles. But it is great fun going in and coming out, too; no ferryboats, no street cars, nothing at all to bother us. Only once set foot on this solid, sand-locked, steel rail and you don't care at all or feel any sort of jolt—soul or body—until you step down and out in clear, cold water, tee-total Glendale!"

TOTALS FOR SERVICE

City records show that on the first of March, this year, there were more than 7000 water meters and more than 9000 electric light meters in service.

OUTSIDERS RUSH TO SECURE LOTS

Hospital Site on Broadway Lures Buyers From Other Cities

Evidently those people living at distant points from Glendale have more faith in the future of Glendale than the local residents, if the interest taken in the proposed sale of the Glendale Sanitarium property on Broadway is a barometer, according to Guy M. Rush, president of the Guy M. Rush Co.

Last week the first news of the sale of that property was printed in the newspapers and instead of a number of Glendale people being the first to seize the opportunity that this property offers, the initial reservation was received from a large and influential property owner of Long Beach and San Pedro. This man is known for his farsightedness in the buying of property and, according to his own statement, Jackson Street just off Broadway in Glendale is one of the best spots in which to invest money today. Substantiating the belief of this man, the next reservation was made by two of the most prominent downtown realty operators of Los Angeles for their own account. It is the business of these men to know values and the fact that almost every investment they have made has developed into a money maker is convincing proof that this sanitarium property is destined to mount in value until it pays handsome profits to the buyers of today.

"After three well known Southern California men had vouched their confidence in the Broadway Central Business Tract, we thought that some Glendale person would be on the ground to share in the profits of this property," says Guy M. Rush, president of the Guy M. Rush Company, which is handling the subdivision and sale of the tract, "but our expectations went astray because the next reservation was made by a qualified real estate operator whose arrival from San Francisco was so recent that he still misses the fogs. This man stated to me that he had long heard of Glendale and made a careful investigation of the local situation which resulted in several important investments. When he saw in the papers that a tract of land right in the center of the business district of the city was to be sold below market valuations he was interested and after a careful survey of conditions immediately surrounding this property he was convinced that there was the place to invest if he wanted to make some real money, so he selected the highest priced parcel in the tract. No sooner had he departed than we received one from a man in Sacramento. This man had been a resident of Southern California in the past and knew Glendale. He was wholly familiar with the Glendale Sanitarium property and its advantageous location. His wire brought a request for prices and we mailed him detailed information. The result was his application for a reservation.

Buys By Phone

"Wednesday, long distance from Bakersfield called us and on the other end of the wire was a fellow who was looking for a place to invest some money in business property and having been told of Glendale's wonderful growth he was intently interested in the purchase of Broadway property. We had only to tell him that three years ago the entire site could have been bought for $55,000 and that today it was worth many times that amount to show him the relative value of the site and when we told him that he could purchase a business lot here at as much as $50 a front foot less than surrounding property, he asked us to use our own judgment in selecting a lot for him and wired us a deposit.

"Surely the people of Glendale are not going to allow outsiders to come into this town and acquire the cream of the business property. You who have lived here and seen the town grow from a village into a city of 40,000 surely must have faith in its future and will be quick to seize such opportunities as the subdivision of property of the Glendale Sanitarium offers. Right here, the people of Glendale can do what outsiders are doing. They can invest a small amount of money and watch it grow to proud proportions. We have originated a plan by which the investor can pay but a small amount now and guarantee him a profit on his money this year. Our terms of sale and our interest rates are so low that there is no obstacle left in the path of those of limited means to acquire property here.

Man Starts on Third World Tour on Foot

MARGATE, Eng., March 24.—E. B. Atherton, formerly of Chicago, has set out on a walk around the world. He hopes to accomplish the self-imposed task within ten years.

For twenty-three years Atherton has wanted to walk around the world and the present is his third attempt. In 1900 he started from Chicago and had been on the road for twelve years when the Balkan war caused an enforced rest. He had not gone far on his second venture when the great war broke out and he joined the British army.

Atherton plans to make a complete circuit of the British Isles, thence, across Europe, through France, Belgium, Scandinavia, Russia and the Balkan states, through Turkey into Asia, across Persia to India, China and Japan, the East Indies to Australia, Africa, North and South America, and returning along the Mediterranean coast.

American Born Woman Is Japanese Citizen

HONOLULU, March 24.—Mitsuyo Hoshida, missionary and the first and only known American woman to become a naturalized subject of the Japanese Empire, is in Honolulu for a three months' rest in order to recover from an illness with which she was stricken after many years of missionary work in Japan.

What her real name is she will not divulge, and she says nothing of her early life, except to reveal that she was born in a little Wisconsin town some fifty years ago. She is a gentle, cultured woman with fine, intelligent eyes and rapidly graying hair. Thirty years ago Miss Hoshida, as she is now known, went to Japan as a missionary and since then has lived at the Japanese naval base at Yokosuka, where she has worked among Japanese sailors. She speaks Japanese fluently and is now studying the written language.

When the vessel on which she arrived here docked Miss Hoshida had to wait her turn with the other aliens to take the regular immigration examination. She likewise had to pay the alien head tax of $8.

Wicked to Bar Kids, Says Boston Landlady

BOSTON, March 24. — "Children Welcome." This notice, curious as it may seem, was inserted in a local newspaper recently by Mrs. Mary J. Borhek, of No. 6 Lyndhurst street, Dorchester, who has a ten-room tenement to let.

"I think it's wicked for people to own houses and prohibit families having little ones renting them," declared Mrs. Borhek. "I have owned the house in question for a number of years. The present occupants have several children, the youngest three years of age, the eldest thirteen. The house has not been injured in any way."

Briton Hears of Noted London Cafe in U. S.

LONDON, March 24.—Stanley Baldwin, chancellor of the exchequer, had to go to America to learn about Fleet Street's famous old restaurant, "The Cheshire Cheese."

On his return from America the chancellor was given a dinner and insisted that it must take place at "The Cheshire Cheese."

"When my colleagues suggested giving me a dinner," said Baldwin, "I said it must take place in the chop room at the Cheshire Cheese. What made me decide thusly was the way the Americans spoke of the place. When they learned I had never visited the inn they made me promise to visit it as soon as I returned."

All of which may go to prove either one of two things—that it's a wise man who knows his own town, or that American tourists fall for "come on" stuff. Take your chance.

G. & M. RAILWAY SYSTEM READY FOR EXPANSION

Decision Of State Commission Clears Way For Immediate Action; Large Sum Will Be Expended for Improvements

OF prime importance to Glendale and all surrounding territory is the approval by the State Railroad Commission, in an order issued Monday, March 19, of the operating agreement between the Glendale & Montrose Railway Company and the Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railway Company, for the electrification and joint operation of trackage between La Crescenta, Glendale and Glassell Park, connecting at the latter point with the yellow car line to Los Angeles.

"This favorable action by the railroad commission," states P. L. Hatch, general manager of the Glendale & Montrose Railway Company, "clears the way for immediate action. There remains now but to receive the actual permission to operate an electric service over this trackage, and as this permission is practically assured, approval of our operating agreement means that we are ready to 'shoot.'

"Our attorneys have gone north to confer in San Francisco with the commission regarding the above mentioned permission, and I believe they will come back with the requisite authority, in due legal form.

Ready for Work

"That would mean we would at once begin to expend our budget of $125,000, which is all raised and set aside, and that contracts which are all prepared and in readiness would at once be let."

Among the contracts which will be let in connection with the development of the Los Angeles & Salt Lake trackage by the Glendale & Montrose Railway Company, Mr. Hatch brought out, will be one calling for the erection of a 300-kilowatt power sub-station near Glendale avenue and Broadway.

Plans also call for the erection of an office building and station on Glendale avenue between Wilson and Broadway; and a number of the most up-to-date, roomy cars of the safety type, to be operated either by one or two men, are to be added to the company's equipment, together with miles of copper wire, thousands of poles, and numerous other items that go to make the $125,000 budget.

Altogether, the project calls for the electrifying of three and one-half miles of new trackage, which should be in operation by January 1, 1924, states General Manager Hatch.

Progressive Step

C. W. Ingledue voices the attitude of the Glendale Advancement Association, of which he is president, toward the project when he states that it is one of the largest progressive steps in the history of the city, and one that will benefit every citizen, not only of Glendale but of the entire vicinity, all up and down the valley.

"The attitude of the Glendale Advancement Association toward this important development of transportation facilities," states Mr. Ingledue, "was shown clearly when we raised $25,000 to back up the Glendale & Montrose Railway Company in their plan. This money is now in the bank, and will be put at their disposal the moment the project receives official sanction and work is begun.

Helps Glendale

"Forty square miles of thriving communities in the upper valleys will be served by this development, and nearly that many more in the lower valleys.

"But that is secondary in significance, important as it is, compared with what the new line will do for Glendale itself. The people of this city should realize that this vast territory has its heart right at Glendale's door—and that in opening up a new pathway to Los Angeles, commerce and trade will flow from the great metropolis inward to our city in a golden stream.

"Those who remember what the Pacific Electric railway did for Brand boulevard and Glendale as a whole, will understand what this development will do for Glendale avenue and the entire city," concluded Mr. Ingledue.

"As you realize the government is the biggest property owner in the world and bringing its real-estate business up to a high standard of efficiency will mean the saving of huge sums of money for the government, and if your organization is instrumental in achieving this end, you can readily appreciate how both our organization and individual realtors as a class will increase their prestige."

BIG DEMAND FOR WING TRACT LOTS

Home Buyers Find Ideal Location; 13 Houses Are Under Construction

The Wing Orange Grove tract on East Colorado street, between Sycamore Canyon road and Porter street, bounded on the south by Windsor road, is enjoying its popularity with Glendale home buyers, because of its proximity to all the lanes of transportation and other facilities, in the opinion of Tract Manager Marvin Smith.

"Consider what it means to people" Manager Smith points out, to be located at the intersection of Colorado street and Sycamore Canyon road, the former leading from San Diego and Riverside to Los Angeles, and the beaches, the latter connecting the upper and lower valleys.

"Consider what it means to be just two blocks each from the trolley and bus lines, two blocks from the Broadway school and three blocks from the new High School.

Big Demand For Lots

"Consider what it means to be able to buy big deep lots so situated, for $1400 and up, on terms of one-fourth down and the balance in three years.

"That is why we have sold eighty per cent of the 114 lots originally in the tract, and that is the reason the rest of them are going so fast.

"Thirteen houses are now under construction on the tract, and more are planned. Many purchasers of these lots have already turned them over at handsome profits. Some have been turned over two and three times—and the tract has been open only a month.

"We know our prices are hundreds of dollars under the market. We don't care. We are glad the people can buy home sites that low.

The Wing Orange Grove tract office, Manager Smith states, is open all day Sunday, as well as week days. The address is 1200 East Colorado street.

should follow Europe's example and establish by specific statute personal liability for damage resulting from preventable fires. It is said that 90 per cent of the fires which destroy $350,000,000 worth of property annually in the United States, are preventable and that a personal liability law would "by one forceful stroke materially reduce" this enormous loss.

Prevention Methods

The brochure, adequately illustrated, deals at length with the causes of fires, preventive methods and devices, and what to do when a fire is discovered. It includes reprints of the Pennsylvania personal liability law and the ordinance on this subject of the city of Cleveland , as well as much other pertinent information. This publication is the second chapter to be issued in the series on "Lumber and its Utilization," now being published by the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association. Three other chapters on the subject of fire prevention will follow.

BEAUTY KEYNOTE OF SUBDIVISION

Glendale Crest to Retain Natural Advantages, Says Promoter

According to J. D. Millar, president of the firm which owns and sells Glendale Crest, no money will be spared to make the improvements at Glendale Crest in a manner to suit all purchasers, and to rush them to an early completion.

"When our engineer laid out this property," said Mr. Miller, "he was instructed to keep the thought of view and beautiful surroundings as the prime factor in his work.

"He has certainly accomplished this in a perfect manner. The winding streets, each one gradually climbing to higher ground where the vista becomes more complete and charming, are designed in such a way as to make practically every lot command a view to be envied by the city dwellers below."

Save Shade Trees

"All the magnificent old oaks and other varieties of trees have been saved and many lots include one or more of these fully developed beauties. Money cannot put such ornaments on property less fortunate in its environments. The public has evidently approved our plans and improvements at Glendale Crest. Although the property has only been on the market a few weeks, over $120,000 worth has been already disposed of. A good many speculators are among our purchasers. They realize that values will rise quickly, as this part of Glendale, although in its infancy as a subdivision section, is beginnng to attract the attenton of all southern California homeseekers.

"The fact that we have all the conveniences and accessibility of the city and the natural beauty and view of the hills has helped us make many sales.

"We are keeping our tract office open every day of the week to accommodate the many visitors that come to inspect the view. Being on Sycamore Drive at Verdugo road, and only two blocks from the Wilson avenue carline, Glendale Crest is easily reached from Glendale or Los Angeles."

CLIMATE IS HERE

Eugene S. Sanders, the new secretary of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, says that the city's greatest asset is climate—better climate than is to be found any place else in southern California.

UNITED STATES BOOMS

A dispatch from Washington says a wave of commercial and industrial prosperity is sweeping the United States, showing a decline in business failures, a rise in prices and increasing outputs.

$450,000 RECORD FOR WEEK'S SALES

Bellehurst Park Lots Go at Rapid Rate to Home Seekers

Bellehurst Park has set a record for sales that has started the entire metropolitan area of Los Angeles talking about the remarkable Glendale tract. Advertising on a scale heretofore unknown in Los Angeles, a tide of buyers that has inundated the old Thom estate during the past week started with a rush on Friday, March 16. The volume of sales increased on Saturday, and on Sunday all records were broken. During the week just ended the total sales exceeded $450,000 and the coming week-end is expected almost to complete the sale of the entire tract.

The reason for this tremendous demand for home sites in Bellehurst Park is attributed by Walter H. Leimert to the unusual value of the property and its surpassing natural beauty. People who see this subdivision for the first time are charmed with the luxurious trees, the back drop of blue mountains, and the attractive surroundings. All the development work in the tract is to be of a quality fully in keeping with the exceptional natural beauties of the old estate now fast being transformed into Glendale's most select residence area.

Close to Los Angeles

Transportation to and from Los Angeles is an important item to many business men who desire to live in the country and yet have city conveniences. The ideal combination is to be found in Bellehurst Park to a very unusual degree. The train service of the Pacific Electric on Brand boulevard, only two blocks away, provides sixty trains each way daily. The running time of these trains is to be very materially reduced as soon as the new subway in Los Angeles is completed. Farsighted buyers are taking this into consideration in selecting Bellehurst Park as a permanent home.

In spite of the rush of outside buyers during the past week, there have been a large number of sales to Glendale people as well. Many who had failed to visit the tract when it was first advertised to Glendale people only have now decided that, with the tremendous influx of outside buyers, this is the logical place to invest surplus funds. The present campaign will keep up for some time to come, bringing new buyers into Glendale every day. Those who have already purchased in Bellehurst Park or who take immediate advantage of the situation are sure to profit in the near future if they care to dispose of their lots at a profit to late buyers from other parts of the state.

Rush Development

All improvements are included in the purchase price of lots in Bellehurst Park. Development work is now being rushed as fast as the large crew of tractors and men sent here by Bates & Borland can put streets in shape. Purchasers wishing to build will find that all sch conveniences will be taken care of before they can complete their homes.

Due to the steady stream of people visiting the offices of the Walter H. Leimert Co., it has been decided to keep them open at night from 7 to 9:30 for the convenience of those who are too busy during the day to carefully investigate the property. A phone call to the Glendale office, "Glendale 3098," will enable you to make an appointment with one of the representatives of the Walter H. Leimert Co. to inspect the map and secure prices on the remaining lots. Complete information is always available at the Glendale office, 246 South Brand boulevard.

BUILDING UNDER WAY

It is the estimate at the city hall that more than $2,500,000 in building is now under way in Glendale—with a lot more due this spring.

CONSUMPTION OF LUMBER IS HIGH

little pine from the north, except what comes out of the Klamath region of Oregon in the shape of box shooks; so, since most of California's demand upon the north Pacific states is for Douglas fir and its associate woods, it is probable that this state took fully 30 to 33 per cent of the fir, spruce, hemlock and cedar produced up there.

Maintain Ratio

California, in 1923, probably will take just as much lumber from the northwest as in 1922.

San Francisco brought in approximately 775,000,000 soft-woods of all kinds during the year of which probably 150,000,000 feet was red-wood.

This is partly balanced by fir and kindred woods going by rail to other parts of northern California, so the aggregate for the northern portion of the state, as heretofore estimated, is about 750,000,000 feet.

The port of Los Angeles alone brought in just about an even billion feet of lumber last year. All but about ten per cent of this came from the producing centers of the northwest—the Columbia River, Coos Bay, Willapa Harbor, Grays Harbor and Puget Sound.

This odd ten per cent was red-wood from northern California.

While the receipts over those docks were comparatively light, still, in the aggregate, they approximate another 100,000,000 feet, bringing the total water-borne lumber shipments to Southern California up to 1,300,000,000 feet.

An estimated 50,000,000,000 additional came from the Northwest by rail.

Tax Free Homes Solve Honolulu House Needs

HONOLULU, March 24.—Honolulu's housing shortage has become a thing of the past, according to statistics made public by Louis S. Cain, city and county building inspector. In 1910 the average number of persons per house was 5.8. By the end of 1921 these figures had been reduced to 5.1. A still greater decrease was reported last year. Widespread erection of new homes has resulted from enactment of an exemption bill granting tax exemption to house owners.

URGES INVESTOR TO BUY AT HOME

Look Over Local Field for Bargains, Advice of Noted Economist

"Investors should keep their eyes open for bargains in their own local communities," says a bulletin from Roger W. Babson, well known economist.

"Instead of searching for opportunities away from home, it may pay you to look over your own field first. Every investor should plan to place a part of his funds in his home town.

"From experience I have learnt that when proper care is taken in making such investments they are highly satisfactory.

"Give especial attention to the opportunities in suburban real estate. While the suburban movement will not be limited to the year 1923, it is rapidly gaining headway, and those who are first to realize it and help in its development will reap the greatest reward."

Claim Best Service For Chicago Hotels

CHICAGO, March 24. — Chicago's hotel service is not outdone by any city in the United States.

The women employes of the hotels admit it.

Thirty-five hostesses and housekeepers of the Windy City's hostelries and apartment hotels met here recently and agreed that the city's hotels are all they should be.

"Training of hotel help" was the subject discussed at the meeting.

TWO LARGE DEALS ARE COMPLETED

Suburban Realty Company Sells Brand Lot, Also Apartment Site

Two large real estate transactions recently handled by the suburban Realty Company, 508 South Brand boulevard, are reported by vice-president and general manager of the company, H. J. Blackmore.

The first of these transactions is the purchase by Mrs. Louise G. Lane, 209 East Chestnut street, of 125 feet on Brand at the southeast corner of Brand and Chestnut.

Mrs. Lane will immediately develop the corner with a one-story brick structure to cost around $25,000, the corner of which will be occupied by a drug store, with grocery and hardware stores adjoining, together with other stores and shops at present under negotiation.

The second of the transactions reported by Vice-President Blackmore of the Suburban Realty Company involves the purchase by J. L. Hirsh, of Los Angeles of the property at 203 East Chestnut street, consisting of 100 feet frontage on Chestnut and a depth of 175 feet.

Fine Apartment House

On the property will at once be erected a very fine apartment house, which will contain sixteen four-room apartments. This location was the former home of the famous actress, Marjorie Rambeau, and is said to contain some of the most beautiful trees and shrubs to be found in Southern California, among them several full-bearing banana trees.

In commenting on these transactions, Mr. Blackmore points out the beneficial effect of the lowering of the Pacific Electric tracks, which is already being felt all along South Brand boulevard.

"Realty values are mounting so rapidly," are Mr. Blackmore's words, "that in many instances rises of from $100 to $400 per front foot have been recorded.

"As a result, our firm has been able to do $500,000 worth of business since it was organized just a year ago."

The only drawback about kissing a girl who hasn't previously been kissed is that she doesn't know how to co-operate.

Ask $10,000 for Brick, $5000 for Half Brick

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 24.—If getting hit with a whole brick is worth $10,000, then getting hit with half a brick must be worth $5,000.

In an effort to prove this contention Mrs. Catherine Killoury, of No. 29 Columbus avenue, Somerville, and Mrs. Mary Ackford, of No. 14 Carlysle street, Cambridge, has brought suit to recover a total of $15,000 damages alleged by them to have been sustained when a brick and a half a brick fell from the house of Abraham Baron, who is named as defendant in the suit before Judge King and a jury in Middlesex county.

Montana Man Deals in Lions in Carload Lots

LIBBY, Mont., March 24.—M. H. Bakker, of this city, who claims the title of world's greatest lion hunter and catcher, expects to ship live lions in carload lots in the future. He has orders for more than 100 lions, most of them for the Home Zoological Arena of Kansas City. He plans, among other things, to put a crew of lion hunters into the woods of Montana, Idaho and Washington, making Libby the shipping point for animals they capture.

Bakker's plan is to fit his ranch to accommodate a large number of lions and, when a carload is assembled, send the animals east in charge of a keeper.

Monocle Newest Fad With English Women

LONDON, March 24. — The monocle, hitherto one of the hall marks of the fashionable London man-about-town, is threatening to become the latest craze among English women.

Increasing numbers of fashionable women are to be seen toying with dainty tortoise-shell, gold and platinum-rimmed monocles suspended on black silken cords or rainbow-hued ribbon.

Spectacle makers report an increasing demand by women for the monocle, which is made to fit the eye with faultless precision, to avoid the possibilities of wrinkles or a crooked contour.

MAKE PLANS FOR DAYS IN FUTURE

Community Center Is Now Building; Many Trails To Prove Popular

"There are some features about Sparr Heights," said a recent purchaser of property in that magnificent 1500-acre tract on the Verdugo road to the northeast of Glendale, "that no other subdivision upon the market can boast.

"In the first place," he said addressing Mr. Walters, of the firm of Barnum & Walters, developers of the tract, "you are planning not only for today and tomorrow, but for the entire future, and thus you are avoiding the discomfort and economic waste that so often are the results of readjustments.

"It is absolutely certain that a town is to rise here which will be to Glendale what Hollywood is to Los Angeles, and in that town there will be no removal of dwellings to make a place for business, for you have settled the location of the business district and homes—in the beginning.

Community Center

"In many of the towns which have grown up without the logical and intelligent planning that we see at Sparr Heights, the Community Center was so belated in its appearance and is so far from the real center of the town and so difficult of access to its population that it is a sort of joke to call it by that name, and the recreation grounds are likewise so inconveniently placed, because they were an afterthought, that they are never either really popular nor largely patronized. Here both Community Center and the golf course are so located that they will always be accessible to the whole community.

"I tell you, sir, the man who builds a home these days needs to think of many things. Among these are environment, convenience and value. His investment is of two sorts, present satisfaction and future prospects, and Sparr Heights answers all of the requirements in both respects.

Becomes More Pleased

"Neither does the buyer invest thoughtlessly. He 'shops,' as do other purchasers of other wares. He considers the claims of all that is offered and, believe me, I took quite a 'look-see' about before I bought this property, and every day and in every way I am better and better pleased.

"This Verdugo road is the only great artery of traffic to Los Angeles, the only inlet and outlet of this section to what promises to be the greatest city on the continent. When I look toward the mountains surrounding this locality, I realizze that this heart of the Verdugo valley is bound to pulse more and more energetically with traffic, and wherever traffic flows towns arise.

"Having a curiosity to estimate just what the traffic now is, I have made counts on week days and Sundays, and I discovered, on making an average, that 200,000 people a week pass Sparr Heights, and as all about and beyond us there are prosperous, growing communities, it will not be long until this srteam of humanity will be much larger.

To Enjoy Life

"Now, while these are the business reasons for the purchase of my property here, there are personal considerations no less important and compelling.

"I came to California to enjoy life. I don't mean that I came here to loaf, but the wise Californian knows how to play, and if he doesn't play in proportion to his work, he can't appreciate to the full the glorious climate and the opportunities it affords for outdoor life.

"Here at Sparr Heights there are many avenues of pleasure. When I desire social enjoyment, and I am a gregarious individual, and my family likes permanent association with pleasant people as well as I do myself, I can find in the Community Center and the golf club opportunity to get that which no city club, however exclusive, can afford.

Hike and Horseback

"I like to hike and ride horseback with my friends and my boys and girls, and here we can all have healthful and pleasurable outings without having to travel miles away from home. We can get the inspiration of glorious views, of magnificent vistas and the peace and serenity of the open spaces and all the time be within sight of our own house.

"Moreover, the location of the homesites is such that this pastoral beauty and serenity will always remain. The view of the mountains, the golf green, and this wide, lovely valley can never be obscured, and Sparr Heights will always be a place where the man who wants a true home for his family will always be certain of achieving it."

LARGE MODEL OF CITY IS PLANNED

J. T. Edwards of Glendale To Reproduce Streets, Homes And Public Buildings

Glendale as it will look to travelers approaching the city via the proposed air route, will be presented at the coming Industrial Exposition, May 25 to June 3, in a large model of the city now being constructed by J. T. Edwards of 1213 North Brand boulevard.

In the model Mr. Edwards is producing accurately and in detail every road and street, hundreds of miniature homes, commercial and club buildings, public schools and churches will be shown. All of these are done in actual miniature and will be electrically illuminated. All means of communication and the proposed airport will be shown.

Good For Publicity

This model will doubtless bring as much if not more recognition to the city than did the prize floral peacock entered in the Tournament of Roses. Thousands of photographic reproductions of the model will be sent to all parts of the world and at the close of the exposition the model will be kept by the Chamber of Commerce for publicify uses.

Mr. Edwards is a master in model making, having made hundreds of models for almost every civilized country, for governments, cities, states and private corporations.

Two of his best known pieces of work are the models of the State of New York, and one of New York City, both of which were highly praised features at the San Francisco exposition in 1915.

SUNSET GROVE

Full Size Lots $975 up. $100 Cash; $20 Per Month

Beautiful lots covered with trees, in a highly restricted section between Kenneth Road and 10th Street, one of the best locations in the rapidly developing Northwest section, commanding an unsurpassed view of the valley. Water, gas and electricity paid.

INVESTORS!

We confidently feel that within a few months SUNSET GROVE lots will be worth from $1500 to $2500. We believe that any fair-minded man who examines the prices of different properties will say so, too. Now is the time to buy, at opening prices. An investment of $100 will put you in a position to reap a substantial profit in the near future.

BUILDERS!

SUNSET GROVE lots offer an exceptional investment for builders because homes in this section sell readily, inasmuch as the house values can be much higher than in any other section, and a small investment will provide lots for future use, while the prices are low for this class of property. Restrictions are sufficient to maintain an exceedingly good class of homes.

Profits on SUNSET GROVE lots will undoubtedly be more than in our FAIRVIEW subdivision where the increase in value has been remarkable. SUNSET GROVE is now about one-half sold. Don't delay, come out and see this beautiful property today.

Drive out Kenneth Road, Grand View Ave. and Tenth St., direct to Tract office on south side of Tenth St., beyond Linden avenue, Tract office open all day Sunday. On Saturday afternoon call at our office on Broadway.

L. A. FURNISHES HALF TAX GAINS

Contributes Major Share of Seven Millions' Increase Paid on Incomes

LOS ANGELES, March 24—Collector of Internal Revenue Rex Goodcell today gave out revised figures showing that the gain in income tax collections of the Los Angeles district for the first quarter, ending March 15, 1923, was $3,206,114 over the same period of 1922.

Announcement yesterday from Washington by the treasury department that income tax receipts for the sixty-four internal revenue districts in the United States for the first quarter of 1923 ending March 15, indicated an increase of $7,000,000 compared with the same period of last year, developed the fact that in reporting a gain of $3,206,114 Los Angeles furnished almost half the seven million dollar gain reported for the entire country.

From January 1 to March 15, 1923, the receipts were $7,795,632.42 as against $4,589,518,65 for the same period of 1922, a gain of $3,206,113.77. The receipts from March 1 to 15, 1923, were $6,113,909.81 as against $3,227,100.56 for the same period of 1922 a gain of $2,886,809.25. When the final figures are determined, which will be April 1, it is believed the increase shown will be even greater. It is estimated that there is $6,000,000 in the unopened mail.

L. A. District First

This gain will place Los Angeles at the head of the sixty-four internal revenue districts in the United States as the showing made is such as to amaze people who are not conversant with business conditions in Southern California and the enormous growth in population.

The intensive income tax drive along advanced business lines, which was conducted in Southern California was watched with interest by government officials all over the country. Collector Rex Goodcell delivered one hundred income tax speeches and was supported by an active publicity department. His slogan was "Smile When You Pay Your Income Tax." The net result of the experiment was that the Los Angeles district furnished three and one-quarter millions of the Treasury Department's seven million gain, and had more than 200,000 returns filed, a gain of approximately twenty-five per cent in number of returns. One interesting feature of the campaign was to induce taxpayers to file their returns early. March 1, 1922, only 1010 had been filed, while up to March 1, 1923, the filing figures had reached 35,208.

More money was collected on March 15, the closing day of the drive than was collected for the entire period of March 1 to 15, 1922.

New York City developed a gain of only $3,000,000 in a turnover of $46,000,000 as against Los Angeles' gain of $3,200,000 in a turnover of $7,795,000.

Steady Growth Shown

February receipts of internal revenue, from sources that reflect Southern California business conditions, show increases of from 10 per cent to 50 per cent as compared with February of last year.

Collector Goodcell explained that the monthly increases in tax receipts were not due to an advanced rate of federal taxation, but to a steady growth in every line of business, and that the government relied upon increased sale of taxable articles and to general expansion in business to furnish new tax that would offset the annual reduction of $15,000,000 made in federal taxes in the Southern California district.

ECONOMIST SAYS GOLD IS DANGER

America's Store of Wealth Lays Country Open to Inflation Peril

NEW YORK, March 24.—Financial experts estimate that approximately 55 per cent of the world's gold supply is in America at the present time. This amounts to about $4,000,000,000.

By F. A. WRAY.
For International News Service

LONDON, March 24.—That a great stock of gold is a real danger to a country instead of being a security is the belief of Sir Josiah Stamp, foremost British economist. Sir Josiah, who framed the economic clauses of the Treaty of Versailles, was Assistant Secretary of the Board of Inland Revenue from 1916 to 1919.

"Now that the greatest assemblage of gold that the world has ever seen has been deposited in the vaults of New York," says Sir Josiah, "far-seeing men and women on both sides of the Atlantic are beginning to realize a remarkable economic paradox.

"This enormous store of the precious metal does not make for wealth or safety. It does not make lighter the burden of the people of the United States; it lays them open to innumerable problems.

Enormous Gold Reserve

"The United States Government today possesses nearly half the total supply of the world's gold, according to the latest report of Mr. W. C. Crissinger, the Comptroller of Currency. This does not necessarily mean that America is better clothed, or housed, or fed than we in Britain. You cannot eat gold. You cannot make it into clothes. You cannot build houses of it. Gold is, in fact, almost a useless thing when it comes to ministering to the real needs of a human being. Its chief function is to serve as the foundation for the structure of credit and as a basis of value and exchange.

"This gold must either be kept internally, and have an enormous effect upon prices, or it must go out of the country to purchase goods.

"The whole economic structure of America has been tending to become that of an exporting country, and, of course, her tariffs are based in that way against imports, whereas, with the payment of a debt by Britain, and also the advisability of exchanging this gold for goods, she is now almost inviting an influx of goods, in exchange. That would raise a howl against the tariff at once. Therefore, she is driven to keeping it within her own country. If it leaves her vaults and goes into general use it will have the effect of vastly increasing prices unless there is an enormous increase in production.

"But there is an even more insidious danger—that the possession of this quantity of gold may lead the Federal Reserve Board largely to inflate currency. When the bullion is unloaded in harbor it is carried to the vaults for safe keeping, and then it remains in reserve.

"Supposing the percentage of reserve under normal conditions in America to be 40 per cent, this means that for every $100 of purchase power and credit in circulation she has $40 in gold wherewith to back it. But today, owing to the enormous quantity of gold, her reserve is approaching double that figure, and she is rapidly reaching the point where every dollar of purchasing power on the Continent could be replaced by gold of its face value.

Danger Dormant Now

"As long as the gold is untouched the danger is dormant. But if, when an improvement occurs in trade, business men seek large increases in credit the Federal Reserve Board may be tempted to lower this reserve ratio so as to give them all that their ambitious programs may require. They might think to themselves 'It would not do any harm to let the reserve down by 5 points' and inflate the note issue accordingly.

"This may have the same effect as if there were a Government press printing paper marks.

"Let us suppose that they succumb to the suggestion. Credit becomes more plentiful because the ratio reserve is lowered. More paper dollars are available, so that prices rise, with the result that a dollar note no longer buys the old quantity of goods. Inflation sets in, with the subsequent Nemesis.

Perils of Inflation

"Workmen demand higher wages, and strikes come, with their inevitable consequences of economic deadlock and the subsequent collapse of industry.

"Thus the undulations of industry are made more severe, whereas the desire of everyone is to introduce a greater stability in trading conditions over the passage of years.

avoid the severity of trade cycles, for every spasm of artificial influence leads further away from the desired object. Every burst of inflation raises many new social difficulties, and just as we are getting into the comparatively level waters after the rough seas of the war we naturally dread new disturbances which may arise in this way.

"We can only hope that the banking authorities in the United States realize the responsibility they have to the world in the way in which they handle their gold problem."

LOS ANGELES, March 24.—Three strange impressions, believed to be the "spirit photo" of Mrs. Mary McVicker, were seen today on the background of a photograph taken while Mrs. McVicker lay in her casket.

In accordance with Mrs. McVicker's wishes a licensed photographer, C. H. Monroe, was called after her death to make a picture of her bier. In making the picture Monroe used a huge velour screen to balance the light, and it was on the screen in the background the unusual impressions appeared. Monroe said he examined the screen thoroughly before making the picture and he found it no different than the kind ordinarily used.

"I can't understand it," Monroe said. "The impressions should not be there."

Mrs. Mary Vlasek, pastor of the spiritualist temple, of which Mrs. McVicker was a member, claims she saw Mrs. McVicker in the spirit at the temple and at the crematory. Other members of the cult claim they saw the deceased woman's spirit at the chapel.

Chemist Claims Process Will 'Keep' Cane Sugar

WASHINGTON, March 24.—A process by which cane syrup will neither crystallize into sugar nor ferment into a highly potent hooch has been discovered by department of agricultural chemists.

Cane syrup, pleasant to take with one's buckwheats in the morning, has not been manufactured in large quantities heretofore, because it won't "keep." Boiled too thin it ferments, while if prepared thick it turns to sugar.

A chemist in the agricultuarl department found by use of a small portion of a drug known as invertase the syrup will "keep" for long periods, making possible its manufacture in quantities.

The discovery is expected to lead to the development of a profitable industry in the south.

SHANGHAI, March 24.—When Kipling wrote his famed poem about the East and West never meeting he evidently didn't count on the "movies" and the part they were to play in making America and China acquainted.

The "movie" industry has arrived in China and the Chinese, who are the greatest theatre lovers ever, are taking to the "movies" the way a California burro does to a trail up Mt. Wilson.

For several months Chinese theatres in many of the most progressive cities have been showing motion pictures. The long serials, with all the thrills from the girl being kidnaped by automobile bandits and rescued by a hero in an aeroplane, to the brave man who saves the girl from being tortured to death by Indians are the most popular.

Then comes the comedy. The Chinese thoroughly enjoy the slapstick pictures and rock with laughter when the blackberry pie is thrown into the face of the hero.

The more serious five-reel features are of little interest, especially if based on the eternal triangle. The Chinese who have never been abroad and do not read English have absolutely no background for understanding the average picture.

The American-made pictures have caused a number of Chinese to form Chinese companies and take Chinese pictures with Chinese actors.

These companies, while they are making a very poor type of picture in comparison with the finished American products, are sending their films into many of the interior cities, and it appears that unless American companies can co-operate with them they will lose a very large market.

At present there are about four companies making pictures, The Chinese, however, find the movie camera very difficult to operate successfully, and the men who have been trained in American studios and really know something of the business are running into all kinds of difficulties when they return to China and try to make pictures.

Recently a Shanghai company made a picture entitled "The Rice Pot's Revenge." (The fat hero, instead of being called fatty, was called the rice pot, which has the same meaning).

In this picture the hero, who by the way was a round-faced Chinese country boy weighing around 250 pounds, was supposed to injure the villain by smashing a flower pot on his head. Instructions were given to the property man to make up some card board flower pots. But the property man couldn't see any reason for making card board flower pots when there were plenty of good, heavy crockery ones. "Maskee," says he.

So Fatty threw a heavy flower pot in which a flower was growing. He hit the villain over the head and he was carried to the hospital unconscious. It was several weeks before the picture could be completed, but "Maskee—can do tomorrow."

Another difficulty was the final fade away. The director wanted a regular Griffith soul kiss fade away. But not a chance. When Fatty was told that he was to put his arms around the pretty little Chinese girl heroine and kiss her he flatly refused.

Such a burst of Chinese as followed this mere suggestion. Fatty ranged up and down the scale for at least fifteen minutes. When at last the air cleared, the director, who was an American camera man, found that Fatty was engaged to a girl in Peking. His parents had arranged the match and he had never seen his bride-to-be. But an engagement was an engagement and he was afraid his parents, or the middleman, or the parents of his financee might see the picture and then his young life would be ruined.

THEATRES

The GLENDALE

"Youth Must Have Love" is the appealing Fox picture showing at the Glendale Theatre today, with Shirley Mason in the featured role.

In addition, five acts of standard vaudeville are on the bill, together with numerous short subjects of more than usual interest.

Starting tomorrow (Sunday), "The Ninety and Nine," adapted from the famous play of the same name, comes to the Glendale for a three-day run.

Miles of forest fire, burning villages, heroic deeds, realistic types, gossips, waifs, vagabonds, a wondrous love story, a splendid cast of players—all these are in "The Ninety and Nine" and more.

The T. D. & L.

"Grumpy," the Paramount special produced by William De Mille, shows at the T. D. & L. Theatre for the last times today.

The story is an adaptation of the successful play of the same name, and offers a pleasing combination of romance, comedy, mystery and thrills, of young love's problems and an old man's understanding.

In the splendid cast are Theodore Roberts, Conral Nagel and May McAvoy.

Starting tomorrow (Sunday) the feature at the T. D. & L. is the sensational Cecil B. De Mille production, "Adam's Rib," the cast including Milton Sills, Elliott Dexter, Theodore Kosloff, Anna Q. Nillson, and others.

Uncle Wiggily Bedtime Stories

— By Howard R. Garis —

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE KNOCKER

Very early one morning the Fox ran over to the den where the Wolf lived, and, with a stone, tapped on the door.

"Well, what is it now?" growled the Wolf rather crossly, for he had not eaten breakfast.

"Quick! Come with me!" said the Fox. "I have just thought of a good way to catch Uncle Wiggily!"

"That will be fine—if it works" sneered the Wolf. "What is your idea?"

"We will stop and get the Bob Cat," spoke the Fox, "and then all three of us will hide in a hollow tree I have just discovered. The hollow tree is along the path Uncle Wiggily takes to go adventuring. We'll hide in the hollow tree and when that rabbit comes along we'll all together spring out at him and nibbie his ears."

"That sounds good!" snickered the Wolf, and soon he and the Fox ond the Bob Cat began to hide themselves in a large hollow tree that grew near the path Uncle Wiggily always hopped along when he went adventuring.

That morning before starting from his hollow stump bungalow Uncle Wiggily tossed out some crumbs for the birds to eat.

"Thank you, Uncle Wiggily," spoke a bird with a large strong beak. "You are very kind. Perhaps some day I may do you a favor."

"Who are you?" asked Uncle Wiggily, kindly.

"I am the Knocker, or Woodpecker bird," was the answer. "I knock the tap holes in hollow trees to eat the bugs and worms hidden there. But now it is hard to find bugs and worms, so I am very glad of your crumbs, as I am hungry."

"Glad you liked them," chuckled Uncle Wiggily, as he twinkled his pink nose and prepared to go adventuring.

Away flew the Woodpecker bird, or Knocker, as he called himself in fun. And, as he was flying along, this bird saw the Fox, the Wolf and the Bob Cat hiding themselves in the hollow tree.

"That is very strange," thought the Knocker. "I thought only worms and bugs lived in hollow trees. I'll stop here a bit and see what this means."

Perching himself in another tree, not far away, the Knocker waited. Meanwhile inside the hollow tree the Wolf asked:

"How are we to know, Mr. Fox, when Uncle Wiggily hops along? We can't see him, hidden as we are inside this tree."

"Oh, I have attended to that," laughed the Fox. "I asked the Black Crow to perch in a tree near by, and when the Crow sees Uncle Wiggily hopping along the Crow will tap with his beak on the hollow tree, and we'll know it's time to go out."

"Ah, ha! So that's the trick, is it?" thought the Woodpecker to himself, as he heard this talk. "Well, I'll spoil their trick."

So, a little later, when the Woodpecker saw the Crow sailing along to do his part the Woodpecker flew at the Crow and drove him away. "I'll take his place and play a trick on those bad animals" said the Knocker.

Soon Uncle Wiggily came hopping along the path toward the hollow tree. Before he reached it the Woodpecker flew to him and whispered:

"Hide yourself in the bushes, Uncle Wiggily, and watch what happens."

hid himself behind a bush where he could see the hollow tree. And then, all of a sudden, the Woodpecker flew toward it and with his bill gave three hard knocks.

"Rap! Rap! Rap!" went the Knocker on the hollow tree.

"Ha! That is my friend the Black Crow telling us to rush out and catch the rabbit!" said the Fox. "Come on!" Out of the hollow tree rushed the Fox, the Wolf and the Bob Cat.

"Where is Uncle Wiggily?" they cried, but the hidden rabbit was not in sight. Neither was the Crow.

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" laughed the Knocker. "I fooled you! It was I who knocked! Ha! Ha! Ha! Uncle Wiggily is safely hidden!" And then the Fox, the Wolf and Bob Cat were so angry that they threw snow balls at the Woodpecker, but he easily dodged them flying about swiftly.

"Fooled again!" growled the Wolf, as he and the other bad chaps went hungrily home. Then the rabbit gentleman came out from behind the bush and, after thanking the Knocker, he hopped safely to his hollow stump bungalow.

And if the red pepper doesn't hide in the rubber boot to bite the toes of the gold fish, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Nannie's hoop.

RADIO DEVELOPMENT

By Lieut John R. Irwin
U. S. Air Service (Reserve)

USEFUL HINTS

For several weeks we have run a series of articles dealing with various types of receivers, but with circuits that are adaptable for the use of crystal detectors only. It was necessary, in order to lead the constant reader up to the latest developments in the radio art that this type of receiver should first be discussed, for without the knowledge gained through such discussion, any explanation of the circuits employed in the use of vacuum tubes would be more or less unintelligible. Before going further with the subject of radio reception, which will include a full discussion of vacuum tubes and the "electron theory," we should like to point out some of the important things that should and should not be done.

As we have dealt only with crystal detectors so far, we shall assume that it is your intention to be satisfied for the present with such a set. Or, perhaps, you are so situated in relation to a broadcasting station, that a crystal set will be sufficient for your needs. The following should be of interest and assist in obtaining better results.

Always keep your set in a dry place—moisture is one of its greatest enemies, especially to batteries and crystals.

Having chosen a crystal set, see that you get a good one, a crystal that can be adjusted simply and easily, and at the same time keep its sensitivity. Do not be misled by elaborate statements in advertisements with alluring trade names. Many of them are the "bunk," gotten together to catch the newcomers into the game. Well known crystals like galena, cerusite, perikon, iron pyrites, etc., have been tested by long experience in commercial practice and will give every satisfaction. The crystal should be handled with care, and not taken hold of with the hands—the film of grease thus caused on its surface will prevent you finding a sensitive spot. Alcohol will cleanse crystals of this fault. See that the crystal is firm in its holder, a slack or loose connection presents resistance to the received energy.

Your telephone receivers should be carefully chosen; do not fall for cheap units. Those with a resistance of from 4,000 to 8,000 ohms are best for the average experimental, practical use. Test them, if possible, before purchasing. Remember that a loud speaker cannot be used with a crystal. This type of receiver will be discussed together with vacuum tube receivers.

Steel Companies Deny Trade Restraint Plan

Famous Harbor Faces New Prosperity Era

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 24.—New Haven harbor has been re-discovered by the very agency credited with having caused its passing as a marine factor and today is "on the books" as having saved Connecticut fuel-carrying facilities when railroads were swamped. Once the busiest marine port in the country, New Haven harbor saw its shipping dwindle to almost nothing as the New Haven Road diverted boats elsewhere. For years only a few commercial boats put in here, though pleasure boats were numerous in Summer.

Hundreds of coal-carrying vessels have made the harbor since the coal strike started, most of the coal being consigned to the New Haven road, whose docking facilities are large, the vessels, ranging from barges to tramp steamers, bearing Welsh and English coal. Late-Winter days find an average of 30,000 tons of coal a day being discharged and additional vessels with 40,000 to 50,000 tons of coal, riding in the channels leading to the harbor.

Old-timers recall days when 1,000 vessels crowded wharves here for days at a time, and steamers departed regularly for foreign ports, as well as for coast points, and there were regular freight and passenger sailings daily for Boston and New York. Then the New Haven bought up the lines and diverted them to other points. Now there is hope that long-deserted docks will be busy again.

'Tuned in' Radio Is Cause of Spook Scare

CHICAGO, March 24.—Samuel Cohn and his wife found a new terror for the radio fan. It's the radio bandit.

All was serene in the Cohn household when Mrs. Cohn woke with a start—she heard mumbling voices from the front of their apartment. Taking his revolver, followed by Mrs. Cohn, he crept cautiously toward the dining room.

Then the voice continued, in a monotone, "Station 9PX; testing."

Woman in Enoch Arden Case Remains Neutral

ELYRIA, Ohio, March 24—William R. Tompkins, steel worker, is in a quandary.

He has received word from his wife, now in Indianapolis, that her first husband, reported killed in action during the world war, and for whose supposed death she has been collecting government insurance, has returned to her.

The woman in this Enoch Arden case announced her intention of returning to Elyria. However, according to reports, she will remain neutral until she is informed legally as to whether she shall live with her first or her second husband.

The Acme Kleerspeaker was developed for the Acme Apparatus Company by telephone and sound engineers because the problem of audible reproduction without distortion is entirely separate from radio.

$7500 Is Moderate Fee For Radicals' Lawyer

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., March 24.—Mention of a "very moderate fee" of $7500 to Frank P. Walsh was made by the "investigating committee of five" which reported on May expenses in the November 1, 1922, number of "Soviet Russia," it was revealed here where Walsh is defending William Z. Foster, noted radical, on trial as a syndicalist.

Labor to Aid Probe Of Radical Leaders

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 24.—The American Federation of Labor probably will offer to cooperate with the department of justice in its investigtaion of charges brought against William Z. Foster and other alleged "reds" in the United States under the federal criminal code of 1910, it was learned here today.

TWO CHANGES IN INCOME TAX LAW

Amendments Cover Tax on Aliens and Exchange Of Property

Collector Rex Goodcell was instructed by the Treasury Department today to put into effect immediately administrative measures to carry into effect two important amendments to the Revenue Act of 1921, adopted during the closing days of the session of Congress which has just adjourned, in respect to exchanges of property and income tax of non-resident aliens. One of these amendments is retroactive to take effect from January 1, 1922.

Section 202 of the act is amended by eliminating the provision allowing the exchange, free from tax, of stocks, bonds, notes, cases in action, certificates of trust or beneficial interest, and limits the cases where securities may be exchanged for other securities without the realization of taxable income to those cases where the exchange is in connection with the re-organization of one or more corporations.

As a consequence of this amendment, any exchange of securities effected subsequent to January 1, 1923, may result in taxable income of deductible loss, the amount of which should be computed as if the securities had been sold for an amount of cash equivalent to the fair market value of the property received in exchange. Section 202, prior to this amendment, provided for the exchange of property held for investment for other property of a like kind without the realization of taxable income.

Aliens Are Taxed

Section 202 is amended also to provide that in the case of tax free exchanges for example, exchange of securities, in connection with the reorganization of a corporation, where money is received "to boot," the amount of gain realized from the exchange is the excess of the sum of the money and the fair market value of the property received in exchange over the cost (where applicable the fair market value as of March 1, 1913) of the property exchanged; provided, however, that the amount of taxable gain resulting from the exchange, shall not exceed the amount of money received. For example, if, prior to the enactment of this amendment, a taxpayer exchanged, in connection with the reorganization of a corporation, stock which cost him $1,000 tor other stock of a fair market value of $1,100, together with $400 in cash, no taxable income resulted therefrom. Under this amendment, the amount of gain resulting from this exchange would be $500, but the taxable gain would be only $400, the amount of money received in exchange.

The effect of the amendment in respect to income tax of non-resident aliens is to give non-resident aliens who are residents of a contiguous country (for example, Canada) the benefit of the 4 per cent rate of normal tax on the first $4,000 of net income in excess of a personal exemption of $1,000 received as compensation for labor or services performed in the United States. Prior to the enactment of this amendment the entire net income of every non-resident alien from sources received within the United States, in excess of a personal exemption of $1,000, was subject to a normal tax rate of 8 per cent. The amendment extends also to non-resident aliens, who are residents of a contiguous country, the benefit of the $400 credit for each dependent. The amendment is retroactive to take effect January 1, 1922.

Uniforms for Deputy Sheriffs Are Ordered

SYRACUSE, March 24.—Sheriff Isaac Davis has decided that his staff must wear nifty brass-buttoned uniforms.

In plain clothes a deputy sheriff is at a disadvantage, no matter how large a badge he has or how deep his bass voice, the sheriff believes. Moreover, the uniform would go a long way, he says, to disassociate them with the old tin stars and the bewhiskered deputy of the stage joke and humorous columns.

$100,000 FIRE IS CAUSE OF PANIC

Washougal Citizens Battle to Halt Spread of Flames From Mill

WASHOUGAL, Wash., March 24.—The entire town of Washougal, located in southwestern Washington on the Columbia river, was thrown into a panic early today when fire destroyed three buildings of the Washougal woolen mills at a loss of about $100,000.

Frightened men and women, believing that the business and residential sections would be destroyed, helped fight the fire and guarded their homes and offices with buckets of water. Wild rumors spread that the town was doomed, which added greatly to the commotion.

The blaze is believed to have started in the drying room and spread rapidly. The wool warehouse and seven other buildings were saved. Fire apparatus from Camas, a few miles away, aided greatly in preventing the spread of flames.

Will Glendale's People Remain Blind to This Big Opportunity?

Right in the center of Glendale's Business District there exists the greatest investment opportunity that this fast-growing city has ever offered—yet Glendale sits back with folded hands, blind to the opportunity, while outsiders, keen to grasp it, are coming in from all directions and making reservations for business frontage in

Broadway Central Business Tract

This property needs no introduction to you. It is the site of the Glendale Sanitarium and must be sold AT ONCE by this institution to finance the erection of its new group of buildings on a new site removed from the business center.

Business Lots Below 1922 Market Prices

Three years ago, people of Glendale, this entire site could have been purchased for only $55,000, and when the announcement is made that the property would soon be put on sale, not one Glendale person arose to express his confidence in his own town by making a reservation. Think what this property is worth today. You can buy it below that value NOW. You can buy it and be assured of a more definite opportunity for immense profits than ever before.

While Glendale people sit back, inquiries come in from all over the state. The first reservation was made by a property holder in Long Beach and San Pedro. The next was by two of the most prominent of downtown Los Angeles realty operators. Then a well known figure in San Francisco circles, recently arrived here, made his selection. A telegram from Sacramento asked that we hold a choice lot for a man there and this was followed by a Long Distance call from Bakersfield making added reservations.

Wake up, Glendale! Don't let outsiders come in and skim the cream of opportunities. We are selling a part of these lots on an entirely new plan and guaranteeing you a profit on your investment this year. Think of it. A Guaranteed business lot at lower prices than many are paying for lots in outlying districts, 10, 15 and 20 miles from the city's center, where the future is a gamble and pioneering must be done.

Act NOW, Glendale! Come over and make reservation prior to the opening of the Sale.

Blames Europe's Woes On Poor Statesmen

DENVER, March 24.—"Poor statesmanship" is the real cause of the chaotic conditions in Europe, declared Captain Eddie Rickenbacher, America's "ace of aces" in the world war, in an interview here.

Captain Rickenbacher recently returned from his honeymoon trip to Europe.

"The lives lost on the field of action in the world war were absolutely wasted, and the selfish, narrow statesmanship of the European nations has brought those countries to the brink of a conflict that will make the last war look like a sham battle," said Rickenbacher.

"The whole situation in Europe was a bitter disappointment to me," said the ace. "I remember at the signing of the armistice, all the glamor and the noise, and the guns and cannons, and airplanes that were part of the war.

"The situation now, however, is more chaotic than it was then. More wars are going on in Europe than ever before.

"This condition is but the result of poor statesmanship. They are all selfish, working for some personal political end. With their intrigues and petty desires they have entirely forgotten to look to the future. There is not a man with the broad outlook and unselfishness of a George Washington, a Benjamin Franklin or an Abraham Lincoln. Some such man must arise, or a war must surely come, and America will inevitably be involved."

Rickenbacher, who is now in the automobile business, predicted that 1923 would see the most prosperous era ever enjoyed by that industry.

D. & R. G. Will Issue Bonds for Equipment

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 24.—Application was made to the Interstate Commerce commission today by the Denver and Rio Grande Western railroad for authority to assume liability on the issuance of $4,500,000 of 5½ per cent equipment trust certificates.

Proceeds from the sale of the certificates will be placed on partial payment of forty locomotives, 1,600 miscellaneous cars and other equipment having a total value of $6,001,525.

Dancer's Husband to Invade Africa's Wilds

BERLIN, March 24.—The artificialties of civilization are too much for Serge Essenine, temperamental husband of the more temperamental classic dancer, Isadora Duncan, and he revealed today that he is going to Africa to get back to nature. Isadora will not accompany him.

Friends hinted that the infelicity of married life may have something to do with the trip, as Serge and his wife have quarreled on more than one occasion. Their last quarrel wrecked an apartment in the fashionable Grillon hotel in Paris, and sent Serge on his way back to Russia. That was about a month ago, but so far Serge (who is a Russian poet) has got only as far as Berlin. The cabarets in Berlin are very lively. Serge does not speak English, but through an interpreter he said:

"I cannot bear European civilization. It is false. I want a civilization that is real. Consequently, I am going to Africa. Ah, there is where men and women act their natural selves. They do not do a thing because some one else does it. They do whatever they want to. It is a happy, natural life. I am going to seek truth in Africa."

Serge did not say whether truth would be sought in the Cairo cafes (by repute the liveliest in the world), or in the Kimberly Kaffirs, which are comparatively tame.

The Russian poet and husband will be accompanied by another man of his own nationality. This companion is also a poet. His name is Kusikow. He, also, is temperamental.

Mine Industry Booms In Eastern Russia

MOSCOW, March 24.—Russian workers arriving from Vladivostok report that the mining industry in the far eastern Russian provinces is booming. American companies, they say, are paying high wages to miners who can speak English, and as a result the provinces of Kamchatka, Sakhalin and Okhotsk are teeming with prospectors and much construction and development work is being done in the mining districts.

Some grow old gracefully, and some try to act young and grow old disgracefully.

The Power of Money

It has power more than any other single thing—except the human mind.

Why?

Because money is a token that represents work or food or machinery—things that are useful and have power to create and satisfy.

That's why your money here in a savings account earns for you. The things back of the money are working and the profits are credited to your account in terms of dollars.

Wouldn't you be foolish not to take advantage of this power of your dollars?

Beautiful Bellehurst Park

will be the greatest day of all!

—Grand Opening Sale All Day on the Property—Never again will the violet mountains above Glendale look down upon such a keen and eager throng of buyers as will gather here tomorrow under the wonderful spreading trees of Bellehurst Park.

All Southern California will be headed for Bellehurst Park tomorrow.

$500,000 in sales to date, and our first announcement in Los Angeles scarcely a week old!

Sunday a large part of the remaining property on sale will be going, GOING, G-O-I-N-G — Every lot a money maker for its buyer.

Never, in all our experience in placing on sale thirty splendid residential parks in Piedmont and the Lake Districts of Oakland, have we seen such instant realization on the part of the public of a golden opportunity.

But is it any wonder, for there is certainly not another piece of property under the blue California skies today that beckons to buyers with such a wand of gold.

Just figure its LOCATION —in the very heart of the wonder city of Glendale—growing like wild-fire—spreading out in all directions—built up absolutely solid to the property NOW.

Just figure its CHARACTER—a 200-acre old estate, with glorious trees in groves of oranges and olives—level and fertile.

Just figure the IMPROVEMENT, the finest that money can buy, miles of paved avenues, with cement curbs and sidewalks, city water, gas and electricity guaranteed without further cost to purchasers of every lot.

Just figure the RESTRICTIONS — safe and sane — the fruit of 20 years' experience — prohibiting apartments, temporary buildings, duplexes, etc., allowing only artistic single family dwellings.

Just figure the TRANSPORTATION — only two blocks from Brand Boulevard, the main street in this city of 40,000. Just two blocks from the Pacific Electric car to your home.

Just figure the tremendous and electric impulse to real estate values of the new subway plans, Los Angeles to Glendale. Millions were made when the subway went through in New York. Millions will be made here by those who look ahead.

BY PACIFIC ELECTRIC—Take FRONT CAR of Glendale Line trains, anywhere on 6th Street between Main and Figueroa. Get off at Dryden Street in Glendale and walk 2 short blocks east.

—In spite of the sensational rapid sale of Bellehurst Park, we have NOT raised the prices on unsold lots. This is absolutely a fact. We guarantee the original low prices for at least a few days longer.
